Johnson infected with HIV virus

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson, whose beaming smile and sparkling play entertained basketball fans for more than a decade, announced Thursday he had tested positive for the AIDS virus and is retiring.

"Because of the HIV virus I have attained, I will have to announce my retirement from the Lakers today," Johnson told reporters gathered at the Forum, where he played for 12 seasons with the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I plan on going on, living for a long time ... and going on with my life," he said. He added that he planned to become "a spokesman for the HIV virus" and would campaign for safer sex.

Both Johnson and the Lakers' physician, Dr. Michael Mellman, said he doesn't have AIDS, only the virus that leads to it. "I feel really good," Johnson said. "I feel great."

Johnson didn't say how he contracted the virus, usually transmitted through sex or intravenous drug use. He referred questions about that to Mellman, who said, "I don't believe we know at this point, specifically."

Johnson repeatedly stressed that "safe sex is the way to go."

Johnson, 32, led the Lakers to five NBA championships. He is the most prominent American to announce his infection with human immunodeficiency virus since Rock Hudson.

Johnson appeared nervous at the outset of his announcement, but later relaxed and smiled frequently.

"I'm going to go on, I'm going to beat it and I'm going to have fun," he insisted, displaying some of the irrepressible zest for life, which he brought daily to the basketball court.

Johnson said he found out the final results of his HIV test on Wednesday. Mellman said Johnson was initially tested for an insurance policy.

Johnson, who was married two months ago, said his wife tested negative for HIV.

Johnson missed the Lakers' first three games this season because of what was described as the flu. On Monday, he was cleared to begin practicing.

His retirement and news of his HIV infection came as a sharp blow to those who knew him, watched him and followed his career.

"It's devastating to us," Lakers General Manager Jerry West said.

"It's really a tragedy," said forward Kevin McHale of the NBA's Boston Celtics. "I mean, the guy has not only been such a great player, but he's been such a great ambassador for the game and everything else."

On the floor of Congress, Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., declared that "this just points out once again to all of us that the AIDS virus is probably going to touch every single family in the country."

Johnson said he was looking forward to retirement, but would miss professional basketball. "I'll miss the battles and the wars. Most of what I'll miss is the camaraderie with the guys."

He said he didn't feel ill, adding, "This is not like my life is over, because it's not. I'm going to live long ... I can work out and do everything a normal person can do."

Johnson has been anything but normal in his basketball career. At 6-foot-9, Johnson revolutionized the point-guard position after leading Michigan State to the NCAA championship as a sophomore in 1979.

'I'm going to go on, I'm going to beat it and I'm going to have fun.'
