

Lacrosse wins first contest

There's an Oregon club sport that features bone-jarring hits, fast-paced action and a high-powered offensive charge. And, no, it's not ice hockey.

It's the Ducks' club lacrosse team, which kicked off its season Saturday by plowing the Eugene Men's Lacrosse Club, 16-8, at the intramural field behind McArthur Court.

The Ducks were led by freshman Dave Huber's five goals. Unfortunately, the Ducks will lose Huber in the spring.

Huber has been offered a scholarship to the Colorado School of Mines, which has a Division-I lacrosse program. In high school in Colorado Springs, Colo., Huber was a two-time all-state selection.

However, Oregon co-captain Eric Bernecker doesn't think the team's losing Huber will be too devastating.

"We'll still have depth in the midfield, a solid line of attack and a defense that will be able to play with anybody," said Bernecker, who scored twice Saturday.

The Ducks return a strong squad from last year's 7-5 team, including Pete Moe and Rob English, also co-captains. The Ducks also boast five players from the East Coast.

"They just end up here. It's just the luck of the draw," Bernecker said of the Easterners. Dave Stringer, a Syracuse, N.Y., native, whipped in three goals, and Ian Haight, from Massachusetts, added a late score in Saturday's contest.

Oregon's opponent, the Men's Club, came out strong, opening up with a goal on its

"But she handled it very well. She is one of our most versatile players."

"After I changed position, my junior year was a real learning experience," Charroin said. Her hitting percentage is up to .238 this season, compared with a .165 mark a year ago.

"I've really trained toward improving my hitting efficiency. I've played miles better this year."

And Gregory will be hoping Charroin and the rest of the Ducks play better tonight against the Beavers, or at least better than in the teams' last meeting back on Oct. 18 in Corvallis. Oregon lost that match in three games, including a shutout in game two, the Ducks' first since 1979.

Oregon State's easy win evened the season series after Oregon won in five games at a September tournament in California.

"We had a different lineup last time against them," Gregory said. "We've had some high points in the last three or four matches."

The Ducks are coming off a come-from-behind win last Saturday against Cal. Oregon swept the last three games, including a 15-1 rout in the second game after losing the first.
