POLICE BEAT

The following incidents were reported to the Office of Public Safety from Nov. 8-20:

- A male University student and another man were arrested Nov. 9 on charges of first-degree theft for a book valued at $1,000. Cline said the book, a first edition titled Alcoholics Anonymous, was stolen sometime last year from the Knight Library. Police said the book was recently sold for $850. Cline said police arrested the men after learning of the sale.
- Three stolen rifles were recovered on Nov. 8 from 750 E. 14th Ave., apartment 10A, according to police reports. After police received information that the rifles were at the address, officers arrived at the apartment. An occupant consented to a search. The three high-caliber rifles found were stolen in a Springfield burglary, said Mike Cline of the Eugene police department.
- A burglary was reported on Nov. 9 on the 900 block of 19th Avenue. Entry occurred through a bedroom window at the back of the building. The stolen items' value was estimated at $1,000. Police have no suspects.
- A portable CD player and 50 CDs were stolen from a car after its windows were broken between Nov. 10 at about 11 p.m. and Nov. 11 at about 9 a.m. The car was parked on the 1900 block of Kincaid Street. Estimated value of the stolen items is $1,000. Police have no suspects.
- A University student was charged with assault Nov. 11 around 4 p.m. in the EMU, ac-ording to police reports. The student allegedly struck another student, with whom she had been arguing, with a rolled-up class schedule, according to the report.

• A University student was allegedly assaulted Nov. 9, about 11:45 p.m. in an alley between 11th and 12th avenues and Patterson and Hillyard streets. According to police reports, a man and his girlfriend, both University students, were walking westbound in the alley when they were approached by three men. One of the men, described as a 6-foot-1-inch white male, about 180 pounds, began insulting the female student, according to police reports. She slapped the man in the face. The suspect turned, threatened to kill the male student, then struck him in the face. The male student fell backward, another man jumped on top of him and they struggled on the ground. The female student kicked the first suspect in the groin, according to police reports. The suspects then left. The male student received three stitches in his lower lip; he also had a black eye, according to police reports.

• The Delta Delta Delta sorority reported four men attempting to climb through a window of the sorority house Nov. 15. A sorority resident said the four men appeared to be between the ages of 18 and 21. They damaged a down spout while trying to enter the house. There are no suspects.

• A female University graduate student and Westmoreland Student Housing resident reported an attempted public indecency on Nov. 16. The victim reportedly walked to a laundromat across the street from her apartment where a man approached her and asked for the location of an apartment.

According to a police report, the man began rubbing his groin and when the victim tried to explain she spoke little English, he unzipped his pants.

The victim reportedly ran across the street to her apartment and observed the suspect running southbound on the sidewalk from the laundromat to 16th Way and then disappearing around the apartment complex. The victim said she didn't believe the man was intoxicated or armed. There are no suspects.

• A male University student reported a robbery on Nov. 20. The victim said he was walking east on 18th Avenue when he saw a white car turn into a Domino's Pizza parking lot. Two men reportedly approached him from the rear a few minutes later and one of the suspects hit him.

The victim said he tried to move near the street to call for help but was pulled back out of the road by the two men. According to a police report, one of the suspects threatened him and demanded money.

One of the suspects reportedly reached toward his waistband as if to draw a gun but the victim saw no weapons. The men departed west on 18th Avenue after robbing the victim of his wallet, which included credit cards and cash totaling about $9. There are no suspects.

remarkable thing I am delighted that my kids are able to experience it."

Schaljo said her daughter, Jenny, learned fractions in one day by making cookies. All of the residents in the community help teach the children. One member, for example, is a nuclear physicist who can answer any physics questions that the children may have and another is an artist who teaches the children origami.

After listening to Lost Valley's presentation, Diane Albino, an environmental studies major, said she was impressed but concerned about the children's development as they get older.

"It seems reasonable," she said. "My only concern is that they'll want to interact with others. They'll want a peer group."

Schaljo, however, said the children are free to choose whether or not they want to be taught at home.

Tracy Doherty, a sociology major, agreed that it's a good idea to learn from a variety of different people who are concerned, but she said she doesn't necessarily agree with communal living.

"I have a problem with commune living because I find it to be class exclusionary," she said, adding that she feels that many communities have mainly white, middle class members.

Besides listening to speakers and lectures, students in The Community class also participate in group projects in which each individual is responsible for creating a particular portion of an ideal community. Each member of the group receives the same letter grade for the project.

Ingalsbee said he believes that the grading system gives students an idea of what it is like to be a part of a community.

"This is an exercise in life," he said. "Survival is a collective reality, and I'm trying to give them a taste of communitarianism."

The Community will be offered during winter and spring terms and will again be held at the same time and location. Ingalsbee encourages the public to attend.
