TRADITION

The New Year holiday is an event that lasts from Jan. 1-3. "We usually stay home and eat New Year's traditional food," she said. "Many people go to shrines to pray on the first day of the year."

Miwa Kashu, a University student from Japan, cleans the entire house on the last day of the year to prepare for the new one to come.

"We have a little box which is a shrine we call the House of God, and we clean that too," Kashu said. "We put wine, vegetables and fruit in the box. Then we clean ourselves too."

In her family, they eat traditional food for the New Year holiday and watch their favorite television programs that are on every year at this time. Many go to a shrine to pray for the happiness of family and friends in the following year.

Traditions during the holiday season are unique in every country and within every family. But rooted at the bottom of all of the celebrations is a strong tie to age-old tradition — traditions that make each holiday special.
