The station also awaits the FCC's officially approved call letters to go with their 88.1 FM spot on the dial, after being known as KRMA and KVAK.

Campus Radio's original choice of KRMA was already in use by a Colorado TV station, which opted not to allow Campus Radio permission to use the same letters. The station was referred to as KVAK for a while through a misunderstanding with Johnson Hall, January said.

While awaiting the new letters, organizers are playing it safe and refer to the station simply as Campus Radio.

January, a senior in telecommunications and film, said the station will air an eclectic mix of music and programming, including disk jockeys' personal collections and music in foreign languages.

A management staff of seven, and a 13-member board of directors are actively involved. January said he would eventually like to see a full news team and even some radio drama.

40 to zero," Russell said. After about a half-hour, they were asked to leave, and did.

Gentry said a letter from a woman who had attended the open house best explains her account of what happened there. The woman, who requested anonymity, said Hepner and his friends made "loud comments on what they thought of the center," including disparaging remarks about lesbians.

The woman confirmed that she had an argument with one of the men about his motives for attending the open house because she objected to what she called his intimidating behavior.

To my favorite prodo crew,
I will miss all of yew.
I don't feel a bit of strife,
No more homework in my life.
Pens of blue, a nice cold brew,
Glad it was yew I knew.
