VIGIL

 vigil, which will include poetry, drama and music, will be held in front of Willamette Hall, a science building.
 "A lot of men see women's success as taking away from their own," Becker said. "This is an extreme example of what happens to women when they go outside of the roles that are set aside for them."
 Bill Brotzman, co-director of Men Against Rape and event organizer, agreed.
 Brotzman does not believe men have any reason to be threatened by women's efforts to improve their situations.
 "For anyone to believe that because a woman is a feminist that they're against men, is a fallacy," Brotzman said. "For one group to be pro-themselves doesn't mean they have to be anti-someone else."
 In addition to Becker and Brotzman, students Therese DuBravac, Barbara Rodgers and Tonya Stott helped organize the vigil.
 University President Myles Brand was invited to speak at the vigil, but will be unable to attend. He has prepared an address to be read in his absence.
 Vigil participants will meet in the EMU courtyard at 5 p.m. Once gathered, students will proceed to Willamette Hall.

 Plant's custodial services has been working on the recycling effort. He has phased in the exclusive use of recycled toilet paper and paper towels on campus. He has also made the switch from oil-based chemical gymnasium floor cleaners to the water-based type that uses agents such as citric acid.
 He said he is always on the lookout for new non-chemical cleaners that will not harm the environment or the people using them.
 "I keep talking to vendors," Crouch said. "When they come up with something new, we try it. They have to learn that they don't have to kill the environment to clean things. That whole industry is changing."
