Student stabbed in fight

By Gerrit Koepping
Emerald Reporter

A University student was stabbed just before midnight Saturday in a melee on 19th and Alder streets that may have involved as many as 25 men.

Fritz Gutfleisch, 19, stayed overnight at Sacred Heart General Hospital after suffering a one-inch long knife wound to his chest. He was released Monday.

Eugene police have yet to determine what caused the fight, how many people were involved and if it was racially motivated. Gutfleisch told police he heard a fight outside and went outside to break it up. He became embroiled in the conflict and was stabbed in the chest. After realizing that he was injured, he had a friend take him to Sacred Heart.

The suspect is a black male in his 20s, 6 feet 1 inches tall, about 200 pounds, and was wearing a leather jacket, black shirt and blue jeans.

Another witness reported seeing around 20 black men and five white men fighting. She then heard a man scream "I've been stabbed" and saw a white male clutching his back.

By the time police arrived, the fight had dispersed, and the second alleged victim couldn't be found. Tim Birr, Eugene police department spokesman, said "there has been an amount of speculation about whether there were racial motivations, but we do know there was drinking."

Birr said most witnesses were reluctant to talk to police or were too drunk to be interviewed.

Costume and set designs chosen for Seattle exhibit

By Daralyn Trappe
Emerald Associate Editor

Costume, lighting and set designs by three members of the University theater arts program have been chosen to be part of Design Expo '92, an exhibit of outstanding North American theater design.

Those honored this spring for excellence in theater design are Alexandra Bonds, an associate professor of costume design; Janet Rose, an instructor and lighting designer; and Steven R. McGillivray, a theater-design graduate student.

Bonds' costume designs and McGillivray's set designs for Kabuki/Bacchae and Rose's lighting designs for Into the Woods were selected in a national competition sponsored by the United States Institute of Theatre Technology. The display will premiere at the group's national conference, set for March 4-7 in Seattle.

Rose, who came to the University in 1987, has designed lighting for various University Theatre productions including Love's Labors Lost, The Lady's Not for Burning and annual dance concerts. This spring, she will design lighting for the Eugene Opera production of Don Pasquale.

Bonds, a member of the University faculty since 1979, has had her designs chosen for this biennial exposition since 1984. Other exhibited designs include costumes for Merchant of Venice and Tartuffe.

McGillivray is a master of fine arts degree candidate in theater. His designs also were recognized earlier this year by the American College Theatre Festival.

McGillivray said having his works featured in this year's Design Expo is a high honor.

"It's definitely a big deal for a student's work to even be seen with the designers from around the country that will be displayed there, ... especially to be a designer from one of the schools with a smaller (theater arts) program," he said.

McGillivray said about 170 entries were submitted to the Design Expo jury this year and only about one-fourth were chosen to be exhibited.

"They pick the cream of the crop," he said. "It tells you personally how good your work is compared to others around the country."

Design Expo, which always takes place in a different location, includes members from around the world, McGillivray said, and he anticipates an international audience.

Kabuki/Bacchae was co-directed by Jerry Williams, professor and director of theater, and Janet Descutner, associate professor and head of dance. The production was a synthesis of Greek and Japanese Kabuki ritual with contemporary Western theater practices.

Into the Woods, Stephen Sondheim's Tony Award-winning musical fairy tale, was directed by Jack Watson, assistant professor of theater arts.
