Ohmic Resident of Boynton 401
I was thinking the other night about the Saturday we met after the Workshop, and I remembered though things had been "serious" (we weren't quite sure who the other was) I had fun. The next day, too. Then I acted like a fool, but it seemed like it was all settled Saturday on the walk about. Then some decisions were made on limited information and possibly even poorer (and probably biased) advice to which I acquiesced. But I've always been a fighter, and I realize I would like another chance. Otherwise you'll never experience the midnight parties, the riotous parties, the sudden beach trips, the disaster area room, the lettuce Alfredo, nor the shaved face. You'll miss the bad puns, the dreamy-eyed idealism for the future, the supporting trend, the pod cafeteria serenades, and the messy water fights at 3:00 a.m. In short, on hasty judgment, you'll miss who I am. And while I have vested interests, I think all that would be a shame! So please either give me another chance or let's drop the whole thing on misinformation because a month, or three or whatever is just too long (no offense). There. Everything I didn't say over the phone just because.

Mr. Serious
