forward to all week," Joe said.

Schmerber said longhouses have traditionally held a special meaning for Native Americans.

"You come to the longhouse, you have to leave all animosity, hatred aside," she said. "It's sort of a sacred ground. The longhouse contains a deep spirituality for the people."

Schmerber said that the potlucks are open to everyone, not just Native Americans.

"Don't be surprised if the first time you come up and no one rushes up and gushes you," she said. "Indians are quiet when they first meet you. Once they know you, they'll talk your head off."

Potlucks are only one of the many activities that Tribal Outreach organizes. The group sponsors drug and alcohol rehabilitation meetings on Monday nights and drumming classes on Wednesday nights at the longhouse. Tribal Outreach also distributes food, clothing and furniture to poor Indians all over the state.

The group helps many American Indians who move to Eugene from reservations.

"When people first arrive here, they don't have anything except what they have in the car," said Gloria Yellowbear, a Tribal outreach board member. "As more Indians move into the area, more people coming to the area for jobs as well as education, there's going to be more demand for our services."

The Schmerbers said they do not run a charity group. "We are not on a mission of mercy, nor do we give handouts," they wrote in the group's newsletter. "Our goal is to give a handup to encourage people; to instill a new found strength within themselves."

The Schmerbers said they can always use new volunteers and urge students to call 688-8018 if they would like to help.

all vehicles registered to the residents or their families.

Residents are not required to purchase a permit, but without one they are restricted to the posted time limits.

Permits for most area residents are available at the city of Eugene Permit and Information Center, 244 E. Broadway. Residents living in homes owned by the University should contact the University's Office of Public Safety for permits.

The Fairmount program is an expansion of the program already in place in the South University neighborhood area, which was established in 1978. A similar program was started in the West University area in 1983.

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
Editor-in-Chief of the
OREGON DAILY EMERALD

The Oregon Daily Emerald, the independent student newspaper at the University of Oregon, is currently accepting applications for the position of Editor for the 1992-93 academic year.

Eligible candidates must be either an undergraduate student at the University enrolled for a minimum of six credit hours per term in three of the four academic quarters of his or her term as Editor, or a graduate student at the University enrolled for a minimum of three credit hours per term in three of the four academic quarters of his or her term as Editor. All applicants must be in good academic standing.

The Oregon Daily Emerald is published by a non-profit corporation which operates independently of the University. The primary purpose of the ODE is to provide education and training for students in all aspects of newspaper operation by serving a campus audience with news, editorial and advertising content.

The Editor of the ODE, who reports to a ten-person volunteer Board of Directors, has responsibility for all editorial operations and all editorial content of the newspaper. Term of office is June 9, 1992, to June 7, 1993, and is preceded by an orientation period from April 15 to June 8. This is a paid position.

Interested parties should pick up an application packet, which includes a job description, at the ODE front desk in Suite 300 EMU or call 346-5511 for more information.

Completed applications must be returned to the ODE Board of Directors by 5:00 p.m., Monday, March 2, 1992. An individual will be selected by the Board by April 14, 1992.

The Oregon Daily Emerald is an Equal Opportunity Employer and is working toward a more culturally diverse workplace.
