

'Trading places' schedule outlined

□ Brand will buy books, play Frisbee golf; Jardine will attend budget meeting, hold office hours

As April Fool's Day approaches, the schedule has been set for University senior Brian Jardine and University President Myles Brand's afternoon of "trading places."

"Student" Brand, a philosophy professor adept at public speaking but not well-known for his singing, will participate in Jardine's hour-long vocal jazz class.

"President" Jardine, a senior telecommunication and film major will enjoy his own corner office and staff, receive a briefing on the University's multimillion-dollar budget and inspect progress on the new Knight Library addition.

The role swap is a fund-raising project of the University's Student University Relations Council. The council sold about 150 raffle tickets at $1 each to students who wanted a chance to try out the president's job for an afternoon. Brand drew Jardine's winning ticket on March 10 in the EMU courtyard.

SURC raises funds for campus-wide projects such as Homecoming, Parent's Weekend and blood drives.

Following in the footsteps of his "predecessor," Jardine will also get to hear what is on the mind of students and other members of the University community who sign up for open office hour appointments.

Jardine will have his office hour in Room 410 Johnson Hall from 4 to 5 p.m. Appointments are made in 15-minute increments on a first-come, first-served basis and may be arranged in advance by calling 346-3036.

Brand will attend to more "scholarly" matters: obtaining
