Pilots tennis glides by Oregon men

The first day of April came with a surprise for the Oregon men's tennis team. Only the short notice of an afternoon match with Portland was no joke.

There wasn't much for the Ducks to laugh about after playing either, as the Pilots took full advantage of an unprepared Oregon team and won six of the seven matches.

Oregon coach Buzz Summers worked his team hard all week expecting to have an easy practice on Wednesday and to play on Thursday. But late Wednesday morning Summers got word that the Pilots were already heading south for an afternoon match against the Ducks at the University courts.

"Today was supposed to be a light day," Summers said. "Because of my error, we were not ready to play."

Despite not expecting to play, the Ducks presented the Pilots with a formidable challenge before fatigue got the best of them. Junior Kevin Settlemyre and senior Ted Thoren each took their opponents the distance before falling short 6-2 and 7-5, respectively, in the third set of their singles matches.

Sophomore Lee Kirner, who lost the No. 1 singles match 6-3, 6-4 and in doubles with Chris Gladwell 6-4, 6-3, attributed the lack of success to the short notice.

"It takes a couple of days to prepare for a match," Kirner said. "I was in a 1:30 class when I found out about it."

The only bright spot for the Ducks was provided by sophomore Ryan Marasigan, who won his fifth singles match in
