IFC CANDIDATE PROFILES

James McNicholas

James McNicholas, candidate for a one-year IFC seat, is a University junior majoring in journalism and Spanish. McNicholas is currently the IFC office manager.

McNicholas is also a member of MEChA, the Latino/Chicano student group, and the Office of Multicultural Affairs leadership team.

ODE: Do you favor across-the-board cuts as a means of keeping fees low, and if so, how much?

McNicholas: No. Across-the-board cuts are unfair because the student unions here at the EMU only get, I believe, 30 percent of the $4.7 million that's allocated. The rest goes to the EMU administration and the athletic department.

Across-the-board cuts will seriously hurt the student unions here.

ODE: How would you ensure that every group gets a fair hearing and a fair budget?

McNicholas: As an IFC member, I think the most important thing is to be committed to the student groups, because that's what you're hired for. Any budget — it doesn't matter which budget — takes a considerable amount of time to look over.

I think that every group that comes before the IFC has the opportunity to be heard fairly. I just think that it will take a lot of commitment. You shouldn't be an IFC member for your personal interests.

ODE: Do you believe it's appropriate to hold current group directors accountable for mismanagement by former directors?

McNicholas: That's a problem. Sometimes guidelines have to be set. It's very difficult for just me to decide because I would have to look at the circumstances.

For instance, say that a group went completely over its budget and the director is gone. That's going to set back what (IFC members) are trying to do. Where do you start to penalize people?

And of course the bottom line (is) it's unfair to penalize student groups for something that they didn't do, ... but somewhere along the line you have to set some sort of standard.

ODE: Would you be in favor of cutting large budgets to compensate for increasing or maintaining the budgets of smaller groups?

McNicholas: You have to look over every budget. I think the larger budgets should be looked over a lot more carefully than the smaller budgets because that's a lot of student money you're dealing with.

I'm not going to just say right off the bat 'yeah, ... the EMU presents its budget to the IFC and I'm going to slash it right there,' because every budget deserves a fair hearing. But I do think the larger budgets can afford to squeeze more, to trim off some more fat.

ODE: Why should students vote for you?

McNicholas: Because I'm not in it for myself. I'm not using the IFC as a stepping stone to the ASUO Executive or whatever. I think I have the knowledge to help out the students in some way.

I know I have something to offer, such as commitment, responsibility, and accountability. I think to vote for me would be in our best interests.
