he is proud to be the first Asian American to preside over the ASUO.

Fore said she feels that competence about how to deal with non-partisan issues won them the most votes.

"At first, it seemed like a surface campaign but in the end, students delved into the issues that are pertinent to the University as a whole — like campus safety and Measure 5," she said.

"This year was unusual in the sense that the whole campaign was about who's an insider and who's an outsider," Lee said.

Ferguson alluded to the dichotomy in her comments.

"I would say that students who traditionally vote, vote within their circle," she said. "We were running from the outside and (defeat) is what we expected."

Pharis, who along with his running mate Donald Morgan provided a comedic pressure valve throughout the campaign, said he was glad Lee and Fore won.

"I'm a lot happier that they won than if Don and Holly, Dan, or even I won — because I don't know what I'm doing," he said.

Pharis commented on the election results from his sickbed Thursday night, where he is "suffering from illness due to the rigor of the campaign trail."

"I think students at U. of O. have received our message, and blah, blah, blah... Is this an interview?"

Pulju could not be reached for comment Thursday night.

Voter turnout was even lower than last year, when 14.9 percent of the student body voted. Only 13.1 percent of the student body — 2,292 students — voted in this week's primary election.

The low turnout disturbed the candidates.

"This will be one of the biggest issues that the ASUO will take on next year," Lee said. "Our number one priority will be to find ways to close the gap between student government and the student body at large."

Thursday night's results are unofficial because absentee ballots are still expected. Elections Coordinator John Goodman said fewer than 50 are expected. Absentee ballots could affect races other than the executive.

Runoffs for four IFC one-year seats, two EMU board seats, one student senate seat, as well as first time voting on ballot measures, will take place next Wednesday and Thursday.

first-hand of the horror of the Shoah."

Shoah Week is sponsored in an effort to combat ignorance and give people a deeper understanding of the realities of the Holocaust. Shoah is Hebrew for the extermination of the Jews in Europe, and the week is recognized both locally and internationally as a time to remember the Jews killed in the Holocaust.

"The importance of Shoah Week is to heighten awareness to make sure we remember, so that mass killings never happen again, not to anyone," said Andy Waxman, JSU member.

The series of events will educate through films and lectures but also, for the first time, through a German and Jewish student discussion panel.

"The panel will discuss how today's generations can deal with each other to reach mutual understanding," Zuckerman said.

All of the events are free and open to the public. For more information, call the Jewish Student Union, 346-4366.

Events are as follows:

- Sunday — Fritz Hershberger will speak at 4:30 p.m. in the EMU Ben Linder Room.
- Monday — The films Genocide and Wannsee Conference will be shown at 1 p.m. in the EMU Ben Linder Room.
- Tuesday — The film Facing Hate will be shown at 1 p.m. in the EMU Cedar Room A.
- Tuesday — Bernard Offen will speak at 7 p.m. in the EMU Gumwood Room.
- Wednesday — German and Jewish student discussion panel, on the contemporary relationship of Germans and Jews, will be at 1 p.m. in EMU Cedar Room A.
- Thursday — Anti-semitism in the former Soviet Union will be the topic of a lecture by Soviet Jewish University student Alexander Kliachin at 1 p.m. in EMU Cedar Room A.

SEARCH RE-OPENED

Editor-in-Chief

OREGON DAILY EMERALD

1992-93

At the direction of the Board, the search for the 1992-93 editor-in-chief of the Oregon Daily Emerald has been extended. Applications and job descriptions are available in Room 300, EMU, and will be accepted through April 28, 1992, or until the position is filled. The Board of Directors will begin reviewing applications and scheduling interviews on April 29.

Applicants must be in good academic standing and must meet enrollment requirements described in the job description. Term of office is June 9, 1992, through June 7, 1993; however the board will accept applications from candidates who are unavailable during the summer term and wish to be considered for the academic year September, 1992 through June, 1993. This is a paid position.

The Oregon Daily Emerald is published by a non-profit corporation which operates independently of the University. The primary purpose of the ODE is to provide education and training for students in all aspects of newspaper operation by serving a campus audience with news, editorial and advertising content. The Editor of the ODE, who reports to a ten-person volunteer Board of Directors, has responsibility for all editorial operations and all editorial content of the newspaper.

The Oregon Daily Emerald is an Equal Opportunity Employer and is working toward a more culturally diverse workplace.
