

The National College Newspaper

AN AMERICAN COLLEGIATE NETWORK, INC. PUBLICATION

IN MAGAZINE

Stay cool, read In

Beat the heat this summer. Spend some time in an air-conditioned movie theater, or pack the tub with ice and chill to new albums by The Cure and The Dead Milkmen. Our In movie and music previews show you how to stay cool when there's no school. Page 9

DOLLARS AND SENSE

The Great White North?

Every summer, hundreds of college students migrate to Alaska in search of jobs. Yeah, the big bucks are up there. But many find they have to fish through lots of slime to find their fortune. Page 25

THE STUDENT BODY

Diamond fever

College baseball is in full swing, and as the sport gains followers, fans and funds, it's poised to become the next big-revenue ticket on campus. But could new NCAA regulations threaten the future of America's No. 1 pastime? Page 26

Grade 'A' Sex?

Students and professors fear the consequences of their dangerous liaisons.

PHOTO ILLUSTRATION: STACY STOHLER, INDIANA DAILY STUDENT, INDIANA U.

Flirting with the power of classroom romances

By SONYA TURNER

The Daily Northwestern, Northwestern U.

Andy, a senior at the U. of Maryland, never imagined a routine introductory German class would lead him out of the classroom and into the bedroom of a young instructor from Europe.

It started with lunch, progressed to several dates and evolved to seeing each other about four nights a week.

At times he wondered if their outside relationship would become an issue inside the classroom. "I was worried how she was going to grade me, whether or not I would get any special treatment," he said. "But that never became an issue. She graded my work, and then we went out."

He said he waited until after he received an "A" on the first exam to ask her out, in order to avoid any impression of ulterior motives. "She couldn't think I was hitting on her for better grades because I was getting 'A's anyway."

The relationship ended abruptly toward the end of the semester when Andy lost interest. "It seemed like it was going great, but then all of a sudden I didn't want to see her," he said. "For some reason I wasn't attracted to her anymore, so I told her."

See DATING, Page 6