

GRAD SCHOOL?

Miller Analogies Test?

There are a lot of difficult decisions to make about grad school, but which admissions test to take shouldn't be one of them.

You can take the Miller Analogies Test at your convenience - the admissions test that only takes about an hour, gives you results in two weeks, and fits your budget.

QUESTION:

Did you vote in the May 19 primary?

"Yes, because rather than remain a non-voter and complain, at least I can say I tried."

-Erika Armsbury
sophomore, business

"No. I'm not a citizen. I don't have the right to vote. I've seen many people talking about the candidates who visited the campus. The students seemed to be interested in the primary."

-Jung Wee
graduate, economics

"No, because I live in Cottage Grove and I didn't know where to go. Access was a problem, I guess."

-Jill Davidson
junior, fine arts

"Yes. I thought it would be beneficial if I did. Personally I don't think (students) have the knowledge about the best candidates and they don't think it would be helpful if they did vote."

-Scott Allen
senior, psychology

"Yes, because I think everybody should vote. Probably a lot of students who are registered didn't vote, but there are probably a higher percentage of people voting who are at the University than in the community."

-Diane Henson
senior, psychology

"Actually, I didn't. I've been so busy I haven't had time to think about it. I wouldn't even wager a guess about how many students voted, but if they're in the same situation as me they probably didn't."

-Mike Nichols
junior, journalism
