Party for peace

Story by Layne Lakefish

Dance for 18 hours? Employees at Eugene PeaceWorks and Oregon Green PAC say yes. In fact, they say, "Give Peace a Dance." So that's exactly what they'll be doing beginning on Saturday, May 30, at the WOW Hall, 291 W. Eighth Ave. The band performances and dancing will start at noon on Saturday and end at 6 a.m. on Sunday. Dancers may get sore feet. They might get sore muscles. But they'll be dancing for a good cause. "The dancers are getting pledges, a minimum of $2 an hour for the full 18 hours, and then they'll dance," said Frank Cardoza, Eugene PeaceWorks employee. "So far we have 125 dancers lined up, and they'll get massages and food throughout the night. "We've also gotten a lot of support from local businesses, and we'll have door prizes for the dancers according to how much money they raise. "If a dancer or team of dancers collects $75, a tie-dyed, Give-Peace-a-Dance shirt will be awarded. If $300 is collected, the dancer/s will win a trip to a bed-and-breakfast house in Florence. If $750 is collected, a mountain or cross bike will be awarded. And the team with the most pledges will win a pizza party. "The money that is raised will go to support our programs," Cardoza said. "The money will support our political-action-group programs, such as voter information guides, voter registration and work with local candidates." The dance dollars will also benefit PeaceWorks, which promotes American peace tests, the Food-Not-Bombs program and non-violence conflict resolution workshops in local jails, to name a few. "Our motto is 'Working for peace locally and demanding peace globally,'" Cardoza said. "For people of like mind, Give Peace a Dance is a chance to gather and go in a positive direction together." And while the dancers gather, so too will the bands — all 11 of them. Kate Sullivan and Company, Kudana, Hairy Mammals, Mad Farmers, Rent Party, Hole in the Ocean, Rabbit Choir, Dangerous Household Objects, People's Choir, International Anthem, Crawdads of Pure Love. "We've got a happening lineup," Cardoza said. "This is a significant event just in the realm of the music thing. We're highlighting local music, since nine of the bands are from Eugene. And all together, it's a great sampler of music." For all the dancers who gather pledges and then gather on the dance floor, this event will leave no musical stone unturned. They'll hear it all — and dance to it all. "It's an incredible mixture we've got," Cardoza said. "We've got blues. We've got reggae. We've got rap and bluegrass and rock 'n' roll and folk and alternative and African marimba. It's going to be a great night." The bands agree. "This is going to be a special event for us," said Phil Simon, International Anthem's manager. "It's a chance to associate with a lot of people who really care about live music. "We're also excited to be a part of this because peace has been a number one priority for every member of this band. If, through this event, we can put peace on the minds of just a few people for just a few minutes, it's well worth it for us." The event is open to the public, and the admission fee is $7 to $30, depending on how long you want to stay. "It's difficult in these times, but if people come out and see us, we'd like them to think of peace," Simon said.
