

Bush, Clinton wrap up nominations

(AP) — Bill Clinton clinched the Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday and dueling Jerry Brown in California to close out the bruising 1992 primary season. The Arkansas governor and President Bush girded for a three-way race this fall against independent Ross Perot.

The Texas billionaire wasn't on any ballots, but voter surveys found strong support for his candidacy, especially in California.

Presidential politics aside, Dianne Feinstein and Rep. Barbara Boxer were projected winners in California for the Democratic nominations to two Senate seats. The current Senate contains only two women.

Clinton added New Jersey, Ohio, Alabama, Montana and New Mexico to his primary victory column, and said his triumphs should be a warning to the "forces of the status quo and forces of greed ... the party's over, we're in for a change. We want our country back."

Clinton's support ranged from above 60 percent in Alabama and Ohio to just below in New Jersey and about 50 percent in Montana. He also led in early returns from California. With 2 percent of the precincts counted, Clinton had 53 percent and Brown 31 percent.

Brown, winless since March, proclaimed his campaign a success. He said his campaign had "never taken more than $100 from anybody. That's a miracle. It's a revolution. And, it's going to challenge the lead of the Democratic party to get back to the grassroots."

Bush clinched the GOP nomination long ago, and fashioned one last string of primary triumphs over conservative rival Patrick Buchanan. He appealed for Republican victories this fall to end the "Washington lawmaking gridlock."

Perot, in an interview with ABC affiliate stations, said his silent support came because "the American voters are concerned about keeping the American dream alive for the next generation."

His name was not on any ballot, but the exit polls revealed remarkable strength, particularly in California. Officials in Cincinnati reported some voters were scratching his name onto the ballot, even though write-ins were not permitted.

The polls were enough to send shivers through office holders everywhere as they looked ahead to November. CBS said 68 percent of Ohio voters said the country would be better off if all the incumbents were thrown out. In California, 56 percent want to start over with new officeholders, and in New Jersey, 60 percent do.

Ohio put Clinton over the top in the Associated Press delegate survey.

A post-primary lull seemed unlikely, either for the politicians or the pundits. Bush's No. 1 man in New Jersey, William Palatucci, said of the race to come: "It's too early to tell if Clinton or Perot is going to be the main opponent in November. Today, it's Perot. Tomorrow, it could be Clinton. This is a game that's not been played before."

Democratic Chairman Ronald Brown said the party was ready for a fight. "We have a nominee and we have a tough nominee at that," he said. "We are in a general election mode... This is not a rest period."

Clinton vowed an active several weeks before the Democratic National Convention in July as he sought to burnish his image at the same time he selected a running mate.

Bush had $8.3 million in the bank at the end of May, and has only until his own nominating convention in August to spend it. Strategists hinted he might embark on a post-primary television advertising campaign to bolster his ratings.

Perot is still assembling a staff and formulating issues, and may hold his own convention as he tries to do what no one has ever done.

As for the pundits, there is no shortage of Electoral College scenarios in which none of the three candidates wins a majority, throwing the election to the House.

COURSE

sions have yet to be made.

Ibrahim Gassama, a University law professor who has helped organize the course, said it is important that students show support for such educational opportunities.

"This is a response to the Rodney King verdict, but it is also part of an ongoing concern about racial issues," he said. "This is just the beginning. Hopefully, it will become part of our curriculum if it successful."

"If we want courses such as this at our institution," Gassama said, "we have to show that there's an interest in it. There were hundreds of people here who went out and protested (after the King verdict). I hope those same people will sign up for this."

The course will focus on several different issues within the criminal justice system, Gassama said, such as minorities and the death penalty; gangs and race; and juries and race.

But there will also be discussions about gay bashing and the abuse of women.

At least 30 people must register for the class to go on as planned, said Jane Gordon, assistant dean for student affairs at the law school. However, the course was not included in the summer schedule of classes, and that puts the organizers at a bit of a disadvantage.

Those interested in registering for the course can get more information by calling the law school at 346-3853.

The course will run from June 23 to July 16 and will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4 p.m. to 5:20 p.m. and Wednesdays from 2:30 p.m. to 4:20 p.m.

The cost is $180 for undergraduates and $280 for graduate students. The course is only being offered pass/no pass.

Gassama said students who go through the course will come out with a better understanding of racial issues and how to work toward improving and changing unjust situations.
