Stand tough

By now, every student with any concern for his or her future regrets not taking a tougher stand against Measure 5 in 1990. As a result, the University is facing its worst crisis in recent history.

Unfortunately, the worst has yet to come. As subsequent phases of Measure 5 take effect, the University will have an increasingly difficult time surviving. According to Robert Nosse, executive director of the Oregon Student Lobby, there is even a possibility that the University could cease to exist as a public institution.

Fortunately, there is still something you can do to save our school. Currently, efforts are being made to persuade Gov. Barbara Roberts to call a special session of the State Legislature. If successful, the results of the special session could be a referendum designed to replace revenue lost to Measure 5. A possible outcome will be a ballot measure in September, in which voters will decide whether to support new taxes or allow the state's colleges and universities to continue to decay.

In order to save our University, it is vital that students become active in the political process. There are several things you can do to fight for higher education.

- Register to vote at your summer address.
- Vote and mail in your ballot.
- Sign the split-roll petition.
- Write your state representative.
- Tell your friends to do the same.

Now is not the time to be apathetic. We are paying terrible consequences for our failure to take action in 1990, and we can not afford to let it happen again. For more information, contact ASUO in Suite 4 of the EMU, or call 346-3724.
