UNIVERSITY UPDATE

Truman Scholar named

Tri Huu Bui, a University student majoring in political science, has been chosen Oregon's 1992 Truman Scholar.

Bui was among 75 students from across the nation who received the awards, named for former President Harry S. Truman, on May 31 at the Truman Library in Independence, Mo.

The scholarships recognize the recipients' commitment to a career in public service, leadership potential and academic achievements. Worth up to $30,000 each, the awards can be used to pay for tuition, books, fees and room-and-board costs during the school year.

Gerald Fry, a political science professor and this year's University faculty representative for the Truman Scholarship competition, said in a press release that Bui "is the kind of person whose leadership and outstanding achievements are his way of showing his gratitude for the opportunities he has had."

A member of the University's Residence Hall Governance Committee and of the Office of Multicultural Affairs leadership team, Bui has been named to the University deans' lists and has served as an academic peer adviser, member of the Student Conduct Committee and part of the Student Orientation Staff.

Bui was also co-founder of the Vietnamese Student Association.

Nine students honored

The Department of Geological Sciences at the University has honored nine students — four undergraduates and five graduates — with awards worth more than $7,000 from three departmental fellowship funds.

Jacob Margolis and Caroline Klug, both doctoral degree geology students, received $1,000 Lloyd Staples fellowships.

The fellowship program was established in honor of Lloyd W. Staples, professor emeritus of geology and a member of the University faculty since 1939. This award for geology majors recognizes their academic performance and promise and is given as an encouragement to these students in their studies.

Jennifer Perez, a senior geology major, received a summer field camp tuition scholarship of $659 and a Brunton compass from the James C. Stovall Fellowship Fund. She also received a $500 cash award for the 1992-93 academic year from the Staples Fellowship.

Perez and 17 other geology students are attending the six-week University geology department's summer field camp at which students learn to identify geological boundaries and various minerals. The time is divided between the John Day Fossil Beds and the Willowa Mountains.

Allison Darke, who recently graduated with a bachelor of science degree in geology, also received a Brunton compass award.

The Brunton compass award, given through the Stovall Fellowship fund, recognizes outstanding performance in the undergraduate program. The fellowship was established in memory of Stovall, a University geology professor from 1935 until his death in 1967.

Carol Thornton and Georgia Segal, both seniors, received the Geology Hammer Award, also given through the Stovall Fellowship Fund.

Theodore vonWallmenich and Robert Witter, both beginning their doctoral degree programs in paleontology, received $2,000 scholarships from the Thomas Condon Fellowship in Paleontology.

The Condon fellowships were established through a bequest from Ellen Condon McCornack, a member of the University's class of 1878, in memory of her father, Thomas Condon, a pioneer Oregon geologist and one of the first members of the University faculty.

Cynthia Shroba, a doctoral degree candidate in geological sciences, was selected by the department to receive the Outstanding Graduate Teaching Fellow Award. Her award was the book Glossary of Geology.

Most of the awards were based upon recommendations of the Graduate Admissions and Awards Committee of the geology department.

Quartet takes third

When Gabe Caretto asked two singers from his University vocal jazz class and an award-winning soloist from Springfield High School to join him in forming a barbershop quartet, it was with one specific goal in mind — to attend the first national Collegiate Quartet Harmony Sweepstakes July 1.

After five months of practice, the four made the trip to New Orleans, using donations from barbershop choruses and quartets around the Northwest, for the competition.

The came home with the third place prize of $1,200.

"Secret 4-mula," as the group is called, competed against 16 collegiate quartets. Most of the singing groups had won preliminary contests to qualify for the national competition, held in conjunction with the annual convention of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.

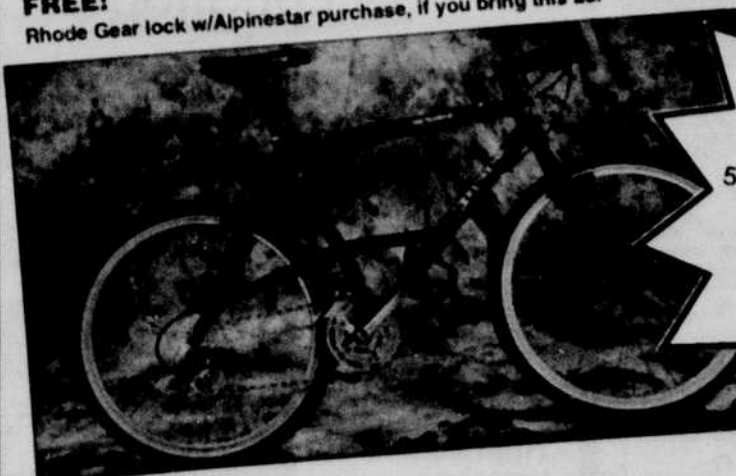

"Secret 4-mula," which also includes University students Brian Jardine and Josh Cox and incoming freshman Nick Larson, sang "She Didn't Say No" and "The Churchbells Are Ringing For Mary" in the competition.
