

Magic says he may play more

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson, eager to rejoin the Los Angeles Lakers after a one-season absence, says he will probably play several back-to-back games. Johnson, who stunned the nation last November by announcing he had the virus that causes AIDS and was retiring, said last month he was feeling fine and was returning to the Lakers.

He originally planned to play in 50 to 60 games in the 82-game season after doctors urged him to avoid playing on consecutive nights. But on Monday, Johnson said he could easily play back-to-back games in Pacific or Mountain time zones.

"Some of those I'll play," Johnson told The New York Times. "I can play in Phoenix and come home and play, Sacramento and come home. Those aren't hard trips.

"There's a chance to play more than I originally said," he said. "I never said there was no chance. It's just something we've always said, 'Let's see how I feel.'"

"I can't tell you how many I'll play, but I've already added one exhibition game, and there'll probably be some I add again. Once the war of the season starts, we'll see what happens," Johnson said.

"Yeah, I am an HIV guinea pig," he added. "I don't mind that. If people want to use me as an experiment, fine. As long as I'm a basketball experiment and nothing else."

As for Johnson playing more games, teammate Byron Scott said: "Good. Make it 70 now. The more the better."

Johnson's comeback started as member of the U.S. team that won the gold medal at the Barcelona Olympics.
