

WOODS

court this season, track is probably her strongest sport. As a freshman last spring, she placed third in both the 100- and 200-meter sprints at the Pac-10 meet.

With Woods' leaping ability, apparent each time she attempts a kill, she seems a natural long or high jumper, but Woods has no plans to expand her track duties.

"It would take too much time to learn those events because they're really technique-oriented," she said. "People think that sprinters just walk up to the starting line and take off, but we spend a lot of time on technique, too."

Although she is already pressed for time playing two sports, Woods doesn't entirely rule out the possibility of becoming the first Oregon female athlete in 15 years to play three sports in one year.

"During my senior season of high school, I was probably a better basketball player than volleyball player," Woods said. "I haven't been able to keep my basketball skills as sharp as they were because I haven't had time to practice, but if the team looked like it was going to contend and the coaches wanted me, I might consider playing."
