CAMPUS COMMENTS

STUDENT RESPONSES FROM ACROSS THE NATION

Where's Ross?

I was disappointed to see that you failed to place Perot's picture on your cover [of the October Election Issue] along with the other candidates. I hope in your November issue you address his re-entry and his positive role in the future of our country.

We need ELECTRO-SHOCK therapy, and believe me, Clinton and Bush won't provide it. Kevin Marvel, graduate student, New Mexico State U.

The Election Issue was printed two weeks before Ross Perot re-entered the race. Also, Mr. Perot earlier declined an interview with U. Our cover was not meant to slight Mr. Perot or his college supporters. —Ed.

Inspiring Aspiring Environmentalists

I recently saw an issue of the U. on campus and I picked it up out of curiosity. I was immediately pleased and impressed because this issue was an "environmental issue." Every article in your publication was devoted to some aspect of the environment and I was immediately inspired. Heidi N. Dyer, senior, Northern Arizona U.

Save the Earth — Stop Copulating

The environmental concerns that were presented so well in your [Environmental Issue] are all important, but in total they don't amount to a hill of beans when they are compared to the fundamental environmental problem which your issue seemed to ignore completely. The fundamental problem is population growth.

The U.S. population increases each year by between 2 million and 3 million people! The world population increases each year by about 100 million people! These population increases are the principal cause of all the environmental problems to which your issue was devoted.

If we are to have a sustainable future for our children, grandchildren, etc., we must work to achieve zero population growth in the U.S. and worldwide as quickly as possible and then we must decrease our populations to sizes that match the carrying capacities of our nations, continents, and the earth. Prof. Albert Bartlett, department of physics, U. of Colorado

Reviews for U.

I appreciated the well-written articles [of the September Issue] on such issues as fighting words, academic economics and football on the brink. As a CSU student, I've seen the football program disappear, 35,000 students scramble for classes and free speech threatened.

I really enjoyed this issue's informative articles, clean photography and general look. Robert Bobich, junior, California State U., Long Beach

I just wanted to say I'm really impressed with your magazine and we'd like to show [the Election Issue] to some people that are out there looking for information about the candidates. The way that both sides of the issues are dealt with is rather professional and appreciated. Van Riker, National Program Coordinator, Rock The Vote

On the Lighter Side...

I would vote for Howard Stern because he appears to have a firm grasp of both his economic package and his package. John Ruckstuhl, graduate student, U. of Florida

To quote Jay Leno: George Bush does nothing, Ross Perot says nothing, and Bill Clinton inhales nothing. Tim Haybrock, senior, Southern Illinois U.

(800) 6 U-VIEWS

Of the 669 calls from Sept. 16 to Oct. 12, 291 were for Clinton, 230 for Bush, 71 for Libertarian Party's Andre Marrou, 29 for Ross Perot, 18 for shock-jock Howard Stern, 13 for "none of the above," three for New Alliance Party's Lenora B. Fullani, and two for Chuck D., of the rap band Public Enemy. Several write-in candidates received one vote.

"After 12 years of Reagan and Bush, they have destroyed the middle class, and Bill Clinton is our only hope to have a chance of saving it."
 — Mark Fleming, junior, Campbell U., North Carolina

"Let's face it, who do you want to be our commander in chief, a pot-smoking draft-dodger, or someone with a respectable record for the past 12 years?"
 — Joseph Ament, junior, Michigan State U.

"The only rational choice here is Ross Perot. After reading all three of their economic plans, in great length actually, I think the other two are just full of it."
 — Ray DiRossi, junior, Ohio State U.

*The U. Student Opinion Poll is a sampling of comments from college students across the country. The toll-free number accepts responses to a question posed to students each month in the pages of U. The National College Magazine. The poll is not scientific, and percentages are figured based on verbal responses received each month.
