Two killed; property demolished in California storm

heavy rain, snow and wind Monday, spawning a tornado, derailing railroad cars, closing Disneyland and freeways and flooding homes. Two deaths were blamed on the weather

The tornado touched down in San Diego County, destroying three carports at a mobile home park in Carls-bad, the National Weather Service said. Funnel clouds also were sighted in the Rancho Cucamonga and Up-land areas of San Diego County. Up to 30 inches of snow fell in the Sierra Nevadas.

Schools closed due to snow in Oregon and Nevada. Heavy rain undermined the track on an overpass south of downtown Los Angeles, causing four freight cars of a train to derail, Southern Pacific Lines report-

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A storm hit California with the railroad described as a moderately toxic material. and the California Highway Patrol shut down a section of the nearby Harbor Freeway in both directions as a precaution

The section of the freeway linking downtown to the Los Angeles Harbor was expected to remain closed until Tuesday morning, the CHP said. California water officials said the storm was a step but only a step - toward ending the state's lingering drought. "This is encouraging. There's a beginning of a snow-pack in the mountains," said Dean Thompson, spokes-man for the state drought center. "But it's a long way from what we need."

Average rainfall at statewide mountain recording stations is still only 68 percent of normal since October, Thompson said.

Heavy rain fell throughout the Los Angeles area. The National Weather Service reported a half-inch of rain in just 15 minutes in Woodland Hills and 5.28 inches by midday on Topanga Summit, overlooking Malibu.

In the Sierras, the storm had dumped 30 inches of snow at Donner Summit and Mammoth Lakes, 23 inches at Echo Summit, 17 inches at Dagget Pass, 16 inches at Meyers, and 12 inches at Incline Village, the weather service said. The Heavenly Valley ski area reported 48 inches during the weekend. Schools were closed around Lake Tahoe.

The California and Nevada highway patrol reported dozens of accidents on both sides of the Sierras.

Along the storm's projected path, winter storm watches were posted for Tuesday over southern Utah, the northern half of Arizona, northwestern New Mexico and the mountains of southwestern Colorado
