

Theatrical Endeavors

If you read the article about where to spend Valentine's Day with your sweetheart, and you're still having a little trouble making concrete plans, the Pocket Playhouse is open and is presenting Postcards Feb. 12 and 13.

If you have never attended one of the Pocket performances, they are in Room 102 Villard, 1109 Old Campus Ln. If you spent all of your money on flowers and dinner, this is the place to be. The cost is only a $1 donation.

The Pocket Playhouse is a nonprofit organization. It earns money from selling concessions at Robinson Theater. Each production is given $50 for each play. "We usually spend about $40 on paint and $10 on miscellaneous props," said Director Rebecca David.

Postcards is the directing debut for David, a theater major at the University. She had to submit the play and then go through a lottery system to be chosen to direct the play.

Postcards opens to three American women in the beach in St. Tropez, France. The women have been their for a few days but have just met one another. The play is considered contemporary and is set in 1992. The story unfolds as the audience learns about the recent experiences each of the women have had to get to where they are now.

The Pocket Playhouse will present Postcards today and Saturday in Room 102 Villard.

The audience gets to know the women as they get to know each other in the play. The three women are played by Sandy Vrvilo, Jill Petersen, and Angie Gaspar.

The Pocket Playhouse used to be a 430-level theater class but has now turned into a nonprofit student run organization. There are about 10 people involved in the production of Postcards. The Pocket Playhouse encourages all students to not only view its plays, but to be a part of the production as well.

All it takes to be a member of the staff is contact through a submitted piece of work or a phone call.

Every Friday at 4:30 p.m. the door opens and seats are available on a first-come, first-served basis. So when Valentine's plans are made, do not overlook the newest production of the Pocket Playhouse. And for any more information contact John Harris or the University Theater box office.
