Aliotti named as new offensive coordinator

By Dave Charbonneau
Emerald Sports Editor

Oregon football head coach Rich Brooks named Nick Aliotti as the teams defensive coordinator Tuesday.

Former Duck player Don Pelum was also hired to coach outside linebackers for Oregon.

Aliotti, who coached outside linebackers and special teams for the Ducks last season, will replace Denny Schuler who accepted a job as offensive coordinator at California last month after seven years at Oregon.

"I'm very pleased to be able to give Nick this opportunity," Brooks said. "As much as Denny Schuler will be missed by this program, I think coach Aliotti will do a fine job continuing the tradition we've established as a strong defensive football team."

Brooks, who was on vacation last week, took less than two weeks to fill the vacant position. Because spring drills start on March 31, Brooks said it was important to fill the position as quickly as possible.

Brooks said he received calls from coaches around the country inquiring about the position but said there was no question an Oregon coach would get the job.

— Rich Brooks,
Oregon football head coach

"I evaluated (inside linebacker coach) Bill Tarrow and (defensive line coach) Joe Schaf-feld," he said. "It basically boiled down to Tarrow and Aliotti."

Aliotti was hired to coach inside linebackers for the Ducks in 1988 and took on the added responsibilities of coaching special teams in 1989. He said he had been hopeful that he would get an opportunity to move up in the coaching ranks.

"Within the last two years, I was hoping there would be an opportunity to be an offensive coordinator, either at here or elsewhere," he said. "But I wanted to stay at Oregon, and I'm pleased to get this opportunity."

Wrestlers take sixth at Pac-10s

By Erick Studenicka
Emerald Sports Reporter

Heavyweight Chris Anderson and 150-pounder Pat Craig qualified for the NCAA Wrestling Championships Monday, leading Oregon to a sixth-place finish at the Pacific-10 Conference Wrestling Tournament at Boise State.

Anderson was the only Oregon wrestler to reach the tournament finals. After wins over Corey Farkus of Arizona State and Steve Lawson of Bakerfield State, Anderson met Cal Poly's Seth Woodill, ranked seventh in the nation, for the heavyweight championship.

As he had done in their Feb. 6 dual-meet match, Woodill outpointed Anderson 6-2 for the victory. Woodill's win gave him the conference heavyweight title for the second consecutive year.

Craig qualified for the NCAA tournament for the second time in his career.
