back-to-back three-pointers. But the Ducks pressured Stanford with a half-court trap and scored the final five points of the half to cut the lead to 41-39 at halftime.

"Our half-court trap worked well," said Green. "It got us back in the game."

Oregon forward Aaron Johnson said the defense the Ducks used is not one they use often.

"We've run the defense in practice a lot," he said. "But we haven't used it much in games. I think it worked real well for us tonight and helped us stay in the game in the first half."

Orlando Williams opened the second half with a three-pointer of his own to give Oregon a 42-41 lead. From there, the Ducks only briefly lost the lead twice, and hung onto a slim lead for much of the second half.

Oregon built its biggest lead of the game after Aaron Johnson — who scored 16 point, 12 in the first half — made two free throws to give the Ducks a 62-56 advantage with 9:15 remaining.

Stanford cut the lead to 65-63 with 6:45 left, but two three-pointers by Williams and Antoine Stoudamire pushed the Ducks' lead back up to 71-65 at the five minute mark.

Oregon held a five point lead after two Jeff Potter free throws, but again, the Cardinal got within two when forward Brent Williams scored and was fouled on a questionable blocking call. But that was the last time Stanford would score for the remainder of the game.

Johnson and Potter played well inside, combining for 28 points and 13 rebounds. Green said he was especially pleased with Potter's 12 point, seven rebound effort.

"I was pleased to see Jeff get some good numbers," he said. "I've been telling Jeff he needs to start putting up numbers. It's one thing to play 35 minutes of solid basketball, but eventually, you need to put up numbers."

Stoudamire led the Ducks with 19 points, but hit only five of 17 shots from the field. Williams had a quiet 13 points as he hit four of five three-pointers. Clyde Jordan was the other Oregon player to score in double figures, finishing with 13 points along with seven rebounds and two steals.

Oregon will finish its season Saturday night against California at McArthur Court. The Bears are coming off a victory over Oregon State Thursday, and look to be headed for the NCAAs.

An Update...

Thanks to our friends who have responded to our call for support of a new radio station reflecting the KAVE's music. If you haven't contacted us yet, please do so immediately. A simple postcard of support will help. Please pledge support for the music and the advertisers on such a station.

All options are being vigorously pursued.

We are Friends of the KAVE, the former KAVE staff, committed to putting KAVE music back on the air. We are:

1. Continuing to gather a local base of support
2. Seeking serious investors to join us in achieving this goal
3. Looking for businesses interested in advertising on this new station.

Thanks to SilverStar Video for donating funds for this space.

Please share this with your friends and neighbors.
