

FOREMAN

1, with 32 knockouts) just for the chance to own a championship belt again.

While the WBO is not a widely recognized organization, Foreman said he would have no qualms about winning the title.

"I will consider myself a legitimate heavyweight champion," said Foreman, the former undisputed world champion before they began alphabetizing the titles.

"I will never drop it in the trash can," the way Bowe did with his WBC belt.

"This will be a very historical fight," Morrison said. "There will be more rockets and bombs bursting than when Francis Scott Key wrote The Star-Spangled Banner."

Morrison's assessment of the scheduled 12-round bout appears on target, because both fighters have amazing knockout records.

"Bombs ... that's what everyone expects," Morrison said. "I'm not going to run."

"George is an elusive, explosive fighter. He's about the most relaxed athlete I've ever seen. He doesn't train very hard."

"George doesn't have the greatest chin in the world, but he doesn't get hit very often. He has a good defense. He's a big lumbering type of fighter. He doesn't get hit on the jaw."

"But I feel George is very beatable. My hand speed is a lot better than his, my movement is a lot better. George hasn't been in the ring with anyone who punches as hard as I do except for Joe Frazier."

The card also will include Carlos Gonzalez of Mexico defending his WBO junior welterweight title against Roger Meyweather, former WBA junior lightweight champion and WBC junior welterweight titleholder in a 12-rounder, and unbeaten 1992 Olympic gold medalist Oscar De La Hoya against Troy Dorsey, former IBF featherweight champion, in a 10-round lightweight match.
