QUESTION:

What would it take to get you to vote in the ASUO elections?

"Some kind of big party with free beer."

ROLAND IPARRAGUIRRE
senior, political science

"I think shaved heads would be nice. But I want those guys who wanted to put a roller coaster on campus last year, back."

MIKE FREUDENTHAL
senior, biology

"Is that what all those fliers are about? I'd vote for a good lunch. Real food, not dorm food."

RACHEL KRAFT
freshman, undecided

"Money. About five dollars."

JULIE OSTER
freshman, biology

"It doesn't appeal to me. There is a lot of discussion, but none of the issues affect me. Nothing is changed for the better."

ABE ESTIMADA
sophomore, pre-journalism

"Knowing more about the issues and what's going on would get me to vote."

JAY MIRANDA
junior, biology

HIGHER ED UPDATE

Two grad students get fellowships

Two University doctoral degree students in geography are among five students in the state to receive the 1992-93 International Trade and Development Fellowships.

Holly Freifeld and Alexander Kliachin each received $10,000 grants for the current school year. The fellowships are funded by a $1 million endowment from the Sasakawa Foundation of Tokyo to the Oregon State System of Higher Education.

The purpose of the fellowship is to "educate graduate students in virtually any field who have high potential for future leadership in international affairs, in public life and private endeavor," said state system Vice Chancellor Shirley Clark in a news release.

Freifeld, who is specializing in the conservation of island ecosystems in the tropical Pacific, will study how human alteration has affected the ecology of forest birds in the Republic of Palau for her dissertation.

Kliachin, whose research focuses on Asian nations and communism, will study the political and ethnic geography of the newly independent countries in Central Asia.

Two professors earn Fulbrights

University professors Diane Ferguson and Philip Grant have been named recipients of Fulbright Scholar Awards for research and teaching abroad during 1992-93.

Grant, a biology professor, received a five-month grant to teach biology in Hungary in the fall. He has been a University faculty member since 1966.

Ferguson, an associate professor of special education and rehabilitation, has completed her four-month stay in Iceland, where she taught not only undergraduate students, but also those pursuing advanced certification in special education.
