IFC allocates increase to EMU

The Incidental Fee Committee and the EMU continued to clash this week when the committee heard several parts of the student union's overall budget.

Although the IFC chose to look at individual aspects of the total budget, EMU Board of Directors Chairman Joe Grube reminded the IFC throughout the meeting that the EMU board would have final say on how the money was allocated.

If the IFC chose to give the EMU a lesser total amount than the EMU board requested, Grube said, the board could choose to reconvene and reapportion the money as it saw fit among the various EMU programs.

"You can discuss this all you want," Grube said, "but ultimately, the board will give each program whatever we want."

IFC Chairman Steve Masat responded that Ilona Kolazar, a lawyer with ASUO Legal Services, had informed the ASUO that nothing in the Clark Document, which gives the IFC fee allocation control, either precludes or encourages the ASUO from having line item control over the EMU's budget.

Masat also discussed with EMU representatives the number of administrators in the student union, saying he believes there are too many and some are paid too much.

EMU Director Dusty Miller said some of the salaries are mandated by the Oregon Public Employees Union.

After several meetings, the IFC allocated a 4.6 percent increase to the student union.

In other business, the Muslim Student Association rose from the ashes and received a 54 percent increase in funds from the IFC during budget hearings Monday. The MSA, which suffered internal conflicts last year, had its budget frozen until now.

The IFC allocated $5,959 to the group on the basis that "Islam is one of the fastest growing and least understood" movements in the world, according to Ali Atoui, an MSA spokesperson.

The Oregon Daily Emerald received a re-hearing at the request of committee member Ed Carson. The Emerald's budget request for $129,000, the same as 1991-92, passed by a 3-2 vote. The committee had originally allocated a 3 percent decrease to the campus daily paper.

The IFC met four times during the week in an attempt to make up for earlier canceled meetings bers voted.

The proposal offered by the women's committee would have banned all sexual or amorous relations between undergraduate students and faculty. It also would have barred similar activity between professors and graduate students in the same department, teaching assistants and their students, and financial officers and any students they could affect through scholarships or grants.

The compromise states "faculty shall not engage in amorous or sexual relations with, or make amorous or sexual overtures to, any student over whom he or she holds a position of authority with regard to academic or administrative judgments and decision."

The compromise says violators would be subject to sanctions ranging from reprimand to dismissal.

The compromise proposed by Raymond J. Nelson, dean of the faculty of the arts and sciences, was more broadly worded than a proposal by an ad hoc faculty group. That proposal would have discouraged faculty from relations with students in their classes.

Kretsinger said the women's committee proposal went further than any policies he was aware of at other public colleges and universities.

one-year IFC seat will also go on the upcoming ballot.

Matthew Hasek and S.W. Conser won one-year positions on the EMU Board. Hasek and Conser won with 639 and 515 votes, respectively.

Stephanie Dixon, Dierdre Johnson and Margaret Chatfield won two-year EMU Board seats with 621, 573 and 586 votes.

Esther Wong, Jack Orozco, Jian Liu and David Swartley will go to the general election for three one-year IFC positions. Julia Wallace, Joey Lyons, David Kuhn and Carrissa Callison will go on the ballot for two two-year IFC posts.

Students will vote on nine ballot measures and candidates next Tuesday and Wednesday in the general election.

COURT

necessary paperwork on time.

In response to the ASUO complaint, committee leaders Steve Masat and Lydia Lerma told the court that the IFC was on schedule to complete budget hearings on time. They also said the committee was making an effort to supply ASUO with a record of all committee meetings and actions.

Early in the hearing, the court said it was particularly interested in determining a workable budget date, but one justice said he was very concerned about the committee's attendance problems and recent vote to reduce its legal quorum from four members to three.

Justice Will Portello said he found the committee's problems with attendance "reprehensible," and said he was troubled by how few people were making decisions for all students.

However, the court decided to rule only on the budget deadline issue.
