TAYLOR'S

"I really like going to Taylor's over other bars on campus because it has no smoking indoors," said university sophomore Sehra Sampson.

This is not to say that Taylor's is anti-smoking explained manager Guy Brinkman. "In order to open up at 7 a.m. to serve food, it's hard to have 200 to 300 people smoking in here until 2 a.m.," he said.

"If I could change one thing about Taylor's, it would be to make bigger bathrooms," said sophomore Kelly Ray. "I have distinct memories of feeling like my bladder was actually going to explode while I was waiting for the one and only bathroom to open up."

Taylor's is without a doubt a small place, but waiting to go to the bathroom is better than attempting to go outside. The campus security does not hesitate to hand-out urinating in public tickets.

With the warm weather of Spring term, Taylor's patio is always a good place to hangout and visit with friends.

May should also be a great month for music at Taylor's.

Expect to see Sun 60, The Strangers and Renegade Saints. The bar attempts to keep live music playing about five nights a week.

"I really enjoy spending an evening at Taylor's listening to good music, but I can only afford it a couple nights a week," said senior Mike Maxfield. "Those cover charges are ridiculous."

Good thing for Mike, Taylor's is going to be cutting the prices of their cover. Almost all cover charges will be $3 or less. A nice change from some of those $6 nights.

dents to discover the homemade food and friendly surroundings.

A very interesting feature to the house is that it has different art displays every month. Local artists decorate the walls with paintings and artwork for sale.

"It's pretty cool checking out the art work, I wish I could afford to take some home with me, it's pretty spendy, but definitely cool," said junior Karen McCann.

When asking students about the Collier House, many of them either don't know that it is a cafe or if they did know that it was a cafe, they thought it was open specifically for the faculty. McDonald urges students to come in and try having lunch there some time.

"The students are very welcome, this house is a campus facility that goes almost unused by the student body," she said.

Junior Todd Moore is one of those students who has never considered the Collier House a dining option.

"I walk past that house everyday, but since I never had a class there or anything, I never really gave it a second thought," said junior Todd Moore.

But other students have known about the well-kept secret for some time.

"I try to eat there at least once a month, it's one of the best restaurants in the campus area for sure, and the service is always fast and friendly," said university student Chris Young.
