Groups look to Bosnia

By Beth Hege
Oregon Daily Emerald

The Muslim Student Association has joined forces with the newly formed Committee for Bosnia-Herzegovina in response to human rights violations against Muslims in the Balkan states.

This week, the groups are sponsoring a number of events to draw attention to the war between Serbian, Croatian and Bosnian forces in the former Yugoslavia.

"This killing must be stopped," said Shin Yasui, a coordinator for the Committee for Bosnia-Herzegovina. "The greatest number of casualties are among the Bosnian Muslims, especially women, who are being raped. We want to respond on a humanitarian basis and not take political sides."

Abbas Seyedolali, director of the Muslim Student Association, said there is an obligation to these people.

"We feel a great responsibility to end the atrocities, not only as Muslims but as human beings," Seyedolali said. "Students should know about genocide. This is a modern Holocaust. In Nuremberg, they said, 'Never again,' but it is happening today in Bosnia-Herzegovina."

The Committee for Bosnia-Herzegovina is sponsoring a benefit dinner May 15 that will assist Bosnian rape survivors and their families.

Yasui said he hoped University students understood the conflict, which broke out a year ago.

Both the committee and the Muslim Student Association have been distributing literature, showing films on the topic and urging people to write letters to their congressional representatives. During this week's International Festival, the groups have co-sponsored films and an information table at the EMU.

The founders of the Committee for Bosnia-Herzegovina — Yasui, Ichiro Yuki and Kenichiro Kashinase — belong to the Japanese Student Organization and have weekly meetings in conjunction with the student group's business.

VOTE

tained, it can be amended, or it can fail.

If the reconsideration vote fails, or if the proposal is approved again, the requirement will be implemented as planned and will affect freshmen entering the University during the 1994-95 school year and after. However, the University Senate still has the opportunity to make amendments to the proposal at its May 12 meeting.

The discussions could also exceed the next assembly meeting, depending on such things as members voting to extend the debates or voting to have secret ballots, Richard said.

"These things could last for several assembly meetings," Richard said. "I have no idea how many people are going to attend, or if anybody's mind has been changed, or if their ideas are more planted now."

The proposal increases the race, gender, and non-European requirement from one course to two courses. One course will discuss race relations in modern America, focusing on African-Americans, Asian-Americans, Native Americans and/or Latinos/Chicanos. The other will discuss how gender, race, ethnicity and/or class shape society.

CONDOMS

the HIV that causes AIDS, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

The product label must emphasize that latex condoms for men are "highly effective protection" against sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS, the administration said.

The condom's manufacturer, Wisconsin Pharmaceutical Co. of Jackson, Wis., will also be required to note on the label that the pregnancy rate for users of the condom — 26 percent a year — is higher than for other female barrier contraceptives.

The pregnancy rate was based on the results of a six-month study of 200 women. The FDA said the high rate resulted from improper use. Women who use the condom correctly each time they have intercourse will likely have a much lower pregnancy rate, the agency said.

A lubricated polyurethane sheath has a flexible polyurethane ring on each end, one of which is inserted into the vagina much like a diaphragm.

The female condom is being sold in Britain and five other European countries.

It was unanimously endorsed in December by the FDA's obstetrics and gynecology panel.

The company will also be required to conduct additional studies on the effectiveness of the product.
