Ex-skinhead reflects on life after acquittal

NORTHWEST killed two people.

But what the 20-year-old former skinhead did say in an interview with The Oregonian suggests she longed to belong, even to something destructive.

Her boyfriend and two friends were convicted of the murders April 8 and will be sentenced May 13.

Sean R. Edwards, 22, and Leon Tucker, 22, tossed the Molotov cocktails into a basement apartment Sept. 26, killing Brian Mock, 45, and Hattie Mae Cohens, 29. Prosecutors said Edwards and Tucker were angry at some black friends of Cohens with whom they had fought earlier.

Cotton's boyfriend, Philip Wilson Jr., 21, helped make the incendiary devices and drove the pair to the Salem apartment.

Cotton, accused of helping to plan the revenge firebombing, was asleep in her apartment at the time of the fire.

Her attorney, Mark Geiger, believes that Cotton needed to fit in with friends as a "family substitute."

"In most families there is no condition for love," he said. "I think she felt she couldn't get love without ... conditions. With her friends, one of those conditions may have been becoming a racist."

Edwards and Tucker had driven to the apartment where Cotton lived with Wilson to put together the Molotov cocktails. Cotton said she tried to talk Wilson out of participating.

Cotton had no family support at the six-week trial.

As a preschooler, she was raped and beaten by her mother's boyfriend, Geiger said during the trial. Cotton's mother, who was mentally retarded, was unable or unwilling to stop the abuse.

One day, when Cotton was school age, her mother left on an errand. She never returned.

Cotton was eventually adopted by a foster family.

Her new father was a Baptist minister, and he and his wife had two older children. She soon became alienated from the family she describes as "really religious."

Cotton met Wilson at a Job Corps program in Reno. In 1991, they moved to Salem and the following year Cotton gave birth to a baby girl. But she and Wilson lacked money and gave up the infant for adoption.

A growing number of their friends in Salem were skinheads.

"It was trendy to be a skinhead," she said. "You're not thinking what it's all about."

Cotton said she has renounced her racist views, but not her friends.

And she has decided to remain in Salem. "I get stared at a lot," she said. "I think I'm getting used to it now."
