

We need: Creative Dedicated Motivated Outgoing Organized Persuasive Smiling Advertising Sales Representatives...

The Oregon Daily Emerald is currently accepting applications for advertising sales people to begin training now for work this summer and/or next fall. The rewards are many. You will gain experience in sales, layout, design, advertising production and business communications, along with many other fringe benefits.

We must be honest and let you know this job is not for everyone. It is highly demanding, stressful and requires a great deal of your time. You can expect to work anywhere from 25 to 35 hours per week and will be responsible for meeting monthly personal as well as organizational goals. You must be prepared to take constructive criticism and work competitively with others. If you have an impossible class load or are involved with extra-curricular activities, this job is not for you.

However, if you have a sense of pride in doing a good job, are creatively inclined, not afraid to work on straight commission and want to service an average of 25-35 local businesses, as well as maintain a normal class load and of course your social life, this may be the job for you. If you enjoy a challenge, don't need anyone to get you up in the morning and operate well under pressure, attend our informational meeting on Tuesday, May 11, 3:30-4:30 pm in the EMU Board Room, 3rd floor of the Erb Memorial Union. Please stop by and pick up an advance application in room 300 EMU, complete it, then bring it along with you to this meeting.

Freshmen, sophomores and juniors majoring in Journalism, Advertising, Business or Marketing are especially welcome. You must be able to work at least one full academic year (excluding summer) to be considered. You must have reliable transportation before you begin the position (sorry, mopeds, motorcycles & bicycles are not acceptable).

Brandon helps Cavs past Nets

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) - The Cleveland Cavaliers never bought it, and they still don't.

While the rest of the world expected Cleveland to dismiss the New Jersey Nets with a simple wave of the hand, the Cavs worried from the moment the pairing was announced.

They didn't relax until winning 99-89 Sunday, eliminating New Jersey in the fifth and deciding game. Next up are the Chicago Bulls, who have ousted the Cavs three times since 1988.

"We were never overconfident playing New Jersey," said Brad Daugherty, who led Cleveland with 24 points and a team play-off-record 20 rebounds. "In this locker room, we knew they're capable. They were one of six teams to beat us here during the regular season. We knew they were going to be difficult."

The Nets stretched the series to five games despite the absence of point guard Kenny Anderson (broken wrist) and center Chris Dudley (broken ankle) throughout and the loss of centers Sam Bowie (sprained foot) and Rick Mahorn (flu) for portions of it. Mahorn played Sunday, and Bowie did not.

Keeping them competitive was Derrick Coleman, praised by Cleveland players throughout the five games as the best power forward in basketball. Coleman had 33 points and 16 rebounds Sunday.

"Derrick scores. Derrick can block shots. Derrick can rebound. He shoots the three-point shot pretty well. I don't know what his deal is, why he's not getting the recognition he deserves," Daugherty said.

The Cavs had endured heavy criticism in local newspapers and broadcasts after the Nets beat them 96-79 Friday in New Jersey, forcing a fifth game.

Two reserves, Terrell Brandon and John Williams, finally brought them to life Sunday.

Brandon, a former Oregon star, replaced an ineffective Mark Price midway through the first quarter and scored 10 points while joining Williams in both-ersome double-teaming of Coleman. Cleveland trailed by two when Price left and led 47-38 when he returned at the start of the second half.

Cleveland's starters took over from there. In addition to Daugherty, Larry Nance had 20 points and 12 rebounds. Price, a 37 percent shooter in the first four games of the series, redeemed himself by scoring 16 second-half points.

Coleman scored only eight of his points in the first half, hounded much of that time by Williams and Brandon.

"Each time I touched the ball in the post, two or three guys would come at me," Coleman said. "I started popping out on the wing, trying to get some isolations and some one-on-ones." Cleveland maintained a double-digit lead through most of the second half, but had to withstand rallies in each of the last two quarters. Coleman's three-point-er early in the third period closed the Nets to 49-46, but Nance's short hook then started a 13-2 Cleveland run.

New Jersey got within four on Coleman's jumper with 5:48 to play, but again Cleveland answered, going on a 7-1 spurt capped by Price's three-pointer that made it 88-78 with 4:22 left. The Nets did not threaten again.

Chris Morris had 21 points and 12 rebounds for the Nets. Drazen Petrovic, held to 11 points on four-of-10 shooting, said after the game that he was seriously considering leaving the NBA to play at home in Europe next season.

Petrovic is a restricted free agent, and he said he was upset that the Nets waited until March to offer him a new contract.

"I have two offers in Europe," he said. "This has nothing to do with putting pressure on the Nets, to say that I'm getting two offers from Europe."

It was the second straight year that Cleveland eliminated New Jersey in the first round. The Nets haven't won a playoff series since 1984, when they beat defending champion Philadelphia in the first round.

"Sometimes you have to lose to learn how to win," Nets coach Chuck Daly said. "We made a valiant effort in this series."

Knicks sting Hornets in game one

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 33 points and the New York Knicks shackled Alonzo Mourning and the Charlotte Hornets in the second half Sunday, winning the opener of their play-off series 111-95.

The Hornets led most of the way even though all-star Larry Johnson sprained his right leg above the ankle a minute into the game, forcing him to the sidelines after he hit two jumpers in the first 46 seconds.

His absence for more than half the game hurt the Hornets. Johnson played more minutes than any player in the NBA this season, averaging 22.1 points and 10.5 rebounds as Charlotte made the playoffs for the first time in its five-year history.

Johnson returned in the third quarter, but he finished with just nine points and could not stop New York from winning the opener of the best-of-seven series, which resumes Wednesday at Madison Square Garden.

Mourning had 21 of his 27 points and nine of his 13 rebounds in the first half as the Hornets led by as many as 12 in the second quarter. The Knicks came back to tie the score at halftime, but Johnny Newman scored six of his 18 points as Charlotte started the third quarter with a 16-6 spurt for a 73-

63 lead.

However, the Hornets were outscored 48-22 in the final 18:47.

Charles Oakley had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Knicks, and John Starks added 14 points and 12 assists.

Oakley, who averaged just 6.9 points in the regular season before improving to 10.5 in the Knicks' first-round victory over Indiana, scored six of his 10 first-quarter points in the first four minutes, helping New York take a 15-10 lead after Johnson was injured.

Then Newman and Mourning, who each scored 10 points in the first period, had four each in an 8-0 run that put the Hornets ahead 18-15. Two dunks by Kendall Gill expanded the margin to 30-22 late in the quarter, and Charlotte took its first double-digit lead at 36-26 on a hook shot by Mike Gminski in the first minute of the second period.

Mourning scored the first four points of a 6-0 spurt that gave the Hornets their largest lead, 48-36, before the Knicks scored nine consecutive points to draw within three. Starks hit two three-pointers in the final minute, pulling New York into a 57-57 half-time tie.
