seconds off the qualifying time in the 800 meters, and Lisa Bedwell is only 0.3 away from qualifying in the 200.

Oregon will have several runners looking to qualify for the NCAA meet in the 5,000-meter run. Nicole Woodward, Jenna Carlson, Heidi Van Borkulo-Goldstein, Jill Callero and Niamh Zwagerman are all entered in the race, which is expected to include Olympian Annette Peters and former NCAA champion Sylvia Mosqueda.

Erika Klein will get her best opportunity of the year to run a NCAA qualifier in the 1,500 because former Cal-State Northridge All-American Darcy Arreola and Olympian Suzy Hamilton will also be competing.

TWILIGHT

Dellinger said he hopes to get a few more qualifiers.

"We're looking forward to the Twilight meet because we still need to get some guys qualified for the Pac-10s," he said. "There should be some good competition in the meet from guys who are no longer in our program."

Freshman Karl Keska appears to be the Ducks' best Pac-10 hope in the 5,000, and Heath Howington could add a qualifier in the shot put to go along with his qualifier in the discus.

Oregon has 22 Pac-10 qualifiers so far, including a total of eight in the three sprint races (100, 200, 400). Only Derek Snelling in the pole vault has been able to earn a provisional qualifying for the NCAAs.

Freshman decathlete Ray Livingston is already in Berkeley, preparing for the decathlon portion of the Pac-10s, which also begins tomorrow.
