

Men golfers 12th after first round at regional

The Oregon men's golf team is in 12th place after shooting 5-over-par 293 during the first round of the West Regional in Provo, Utah on Wednesday.

The top nine out of 18 teams will advance to the NCAA Championships in June, but the Ducks are only three shots out of fourth place and ten shots out of the lead. Arizona took the first round lead with a 283 to put them four shots ahead of second-place Fresno State.

"We're right in the hunt," said Oregon head coach Steve Nosler. "In a five-man team event, four strokes can be made up on one hole."

Oregon senior Jeff Lyons overcame illness to fire a 2-under-par 70, putting him in eighth place. Lyons was sick on Monday and missed Tuesday's practice round at Riverside Country Club but led the Ducks on Wednesday.

Oregon junior Randy McCracken tied his second lowest round of the year, a 73, and is in 26th place after round one. Junior Jeremy Forster shot 74 on Wednesday, equaling his best round of the year and is tied for 41st place.

Junior Ted Snively shot 76 and Cam Martin had an 80 to round out the team.

Arizona's Manny Zerman and California's Rob Martin both shot 67 to tie for first place.

been engaged since last April, and we talked about it long before that. There's really no reason to wait. You just know when the time is right."

With all the craziness that has accompanied Howington's spring, his decision to skip spring football keeps looking better and better.

"Participating in spring drills would have hurt me a lot as far as track goes," Howington said. "The last two years I've done spring ball, and it's always managed to screw up my technique. And little things always come up in football, like you roll an ankle or something like that and then it's hard to get back."

Oregon throws coach Stewart

Togher said Howington's decision to forego spring football showed a lot of maturity.

"He's matured enough to see that if you're going to do something, you should do it right," he said. "And I think it will help him in football as well. He's got a clear focus of what he needs to do this season, and that should carry over into football."

Along with his mark of 180-10 in the discus last weekend, Howington also set a PR in the shot put with a throw of 59-0. He attributed the PRs he set last weekend to the layoff of football.

"Right now, I'm in the best shape I can be in as far as throwing goes," he said. "Hopefully, my performance from last week will carry over to this week."

The 6-foot-4-inch, 310-pound Howington also plays right guard for the football team, but said he prefers track, which was the reason for his decision this spring.

"I like track a little more," he said, "but maybe in the long run football will be my concentration because with my size I have a shot — if I play well — to go pro."

"Right now, I'm second string at right guard. The coaches understand that I'm here to play two sports and that it's my choice what I want to do as far as spring goes. They know my capabilities on the field."

Howington has two years of eligibility left for football, but only one for track. Because of that fact, he said he plans to red-shirt next track season to work on his technique.

And to enjoy the married life.
