UNIVERSITY

Graduation speaker announced

By Colleen Pohlig
Oregon Daily Emerald

Nationally recognized expert on history and American culture, Roger Wilkins will speak at this spring's commencement ceremonies June 13 at Autzen Stadium.

More than 4,000 spring-term degree candidates and fall- and winter-term graduates will participate in the University's 116th spring commencement, which begins at noon.

Wilkins, a lawyer, journalist and civil rights leader, is currently a professor of history and American culture at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va. He is also a commentator for National Public Radio.

Wilkins has had various occupations throughout his life.

After occupying several federal posts beginning in 1962, Wilkins worked for the Ford Foundation and then focused his attention on his journalism career. He worked as a columnist, editorial writer and radio commentator for the Washington Post, the New York Times, the Washington Star, CBS News and the Mutual Broadcasting System.

In 1972, Wilkins shared a Pulitzer Prize with writers Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein for the Post's Watergate coverage.

In addition, Wilkins is the author of two books, titled A Man's Life and Quiet Riots.

University President Myles Brand will present the 1993 Distinguished Service Awards and the President's Medals following the commencement address.

Other awards including the Faculty Achievement Award for Distinguished Teaching, Ersted Distinguished Teaching and Graduate Teaching Fellow awards will be given.

Each school and college will conduct their own ceremonies at various campus locations.

The College of Education, School of Journalism and Communication and departments in the College of Arts and Sciences will have their ceremonies before the main exercises on Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and evening, and Sunday morning.

Sunday assemblies include the School of Architecture and Allied Arts, College of Business Administration, College of Human Development and Performance, and the School of Music.

Among spring term's 2,500 degrees are 1,905 completing requirements for bachelor's degrees, eight for certificates, 395 for master's degrees and 79 for doctoral degrees. 166 law degree candidates participated in the May 16 School of Law ceremonies.

OLSPIF, the Survival Center and AVENU, along with discussion of internal matters.

Masat said he is opposed to having another meeting during the period before next year's committee members take over.

"There is no business that needs to be taken care of before next year's committee meets," Masat said.

Carson said the meeting has been scheduled since the committee met May 12.

"There has never been a time when the majority did not want to have this meeting," Carson said.

Mehretab questioned why Masat did not want the meeting.

"We agreed on it at our meeting last week," he said. "It was in the minutes," referring to the minutes from the committee's May 12 meeting. The minutes indicate the next regularly scheduled meeting was to take place today.

Wagoner said it is irresponsible for Masat to try and block the meeting.

"Of course he has a motive not to have the meeting," Wagoner said. "He feels his job and his position as an IFC member are in jeopardy. He should not be shirking away from it."

Wagoner also questioned whether the committee should not meet simply because the terms of most its members end next week, leaving work for incoming members. "That doesn't seem very responsible to me."

Mehretab agreed. "I'm afraid with six new members, this guy has unlimited potential for harm to student government," he said. However, he said he wants to hear Masat's views. "I'd like to hear him defend himself, but I think the issue is worthy of hearing."

Masat was unavailable for comment concerning the efforts to remove him from office.
