Players settle out of court in hazing death

MONMOUTH, Ill. (AP) — Six former Western Illinois lacrosse players settled a civil lawsuit filed against them over their roles in the 1990 hazing death of a team member.

According to Warren County Court records in Monmouth, the six players paid a combined $385,000 in out-of-court settlements to Dale and Alice Haben of Oswego, Ill., parents of Nicholas Haben.

Nicholas Haben was an 18-year-old Western Illinois freshman who was found dead in a dorm room Oct. 19, 1990, after a lacrosse club initiation ceremony. He died of acute alcohol poisoning after a night of drinking a mixture of liquor and beer and eating an excessive amount of food coupled with abusive calisthenics.

His parents filed a wrongful death lawsuit against 12 players who orchestrated the initiation rites. The Habens accused the athletes of pressuring their son into drinking, continuing to provide him alcohol after he became intoxicated and failing to attend to his obvious medical needs.

Those who settled were John Bilenko,

David Carey, Raymond Drew, Chris McCracken, Mark Molzer and Rian Sanders. The Habens' lawyer, Robert Strodel, said Wednesday that the lawsuit against the other six lacrosse club members will proceed.

Those still facing the lawsuit are Steve Kadlec, Marc Anderson, James Boyer, Anthony Kolovitz, Scott Rokita and Brian Donchez.

The 12 were either convicted or pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of unlawful delivery of alcohol to a minor.

Related charges of hazing were dropped in 10 of the cases as part of plea agreements.
