meters to win the 5,000 in 13:20.13.

Williams was ecstatic with his time, a personal record by 17 seconds.

"I got into a rhythm and everything was just clicking," said Williams. "I felt really strong. I've got personal records this year for 1,500, 3,000, and now the 5,000, so I'm very confident going into nationals."

Olympic gold medalists Kevin Young and Michael Johnson each ran meet records in their respective events. Young, the world record-holder, won the 400 hurdles in 48.59, and Johnson won the 200 in 20.56.

Maria Mutola, a student at Lane Community College who has twice represented Mozambique in the Olympics, broke Mary Slaney's stadium record in the 1,000 meters, clocking 2:32.57. Mutola was on a world-record pace for 800 meters, but a stiff head wind slowed her during the final 200 meters.

There was one world record broken during the evening's competition. Craig Blanchette smashed the world record in the wheelchair mile by more than eight seconds, as he won in 3:31.48. In fact, the second and third finishers in the wheelchair mile were also under the old world record.

In the men's mile, the first nine finishers were under four minutes. Bob Kennedy, the reigning NCAA cross country champion, fought off a challenge from Bill Burke in the homestretch to win in 3:56.71.

Former Oregon distance star Annette Peters won the 3,000, becoming only the second U.S. woman to crack nine minutes this season, winning in 8:58.31. Peters took the lead from the start and was never seriously challenged.

SLOGAN

6. "Bird Up" (Cameo)
5. "Detachable Webfoot" (King Missile)
4. "Love Quack" (B-52s)
3. "Duck Shaker" (Wreckx-N-Effect)
2. "Quack In The Saddle Again" (Aerosmith)
1. "Smells Like Green Spirit" (Nirvana)

It's safe to say that the athletic department will probably refrain from adopting any of these hip and timely songs as slogans for the future.

But it's also safe to say that you don't have to be far from brain dead to think up an acceptable slogan, at least when you're promoting Oregon athletics.

Maybe the day will come when we see a poster packed with Duck linemen flipping off the camera with the slogan "Duck Off" towering above them.

Now there's an idea.
