QUESTION:

If you had children, would you want them to be lawyers?

"No. We have enough trouble and chaos in the world as it is."

"No. because there's too many bad jokes about lawyers."

"No. Fifty percent of all the world's lawyers are from the U.S. I have too many friends and relatives who are."

"No. 1 wouldn't want them to be because to quote

Harold and Maude, 'You're not yourself when you're officious.""

> BOB HUMBOLTT junior, geography

"Yes. because they get paid."

AARON EDMOND

"I have to put this in a purely capitalist sense. If there is a market for lawyers, yes. If there isn't, I'd say something else."

Woman pleads guilty to stalking

SEATTLE (AP) - A 32-yearold woman has pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges that she stalked her former gynecologist and threatened her with death.

Vala Karren, a transient who suffers from multiple-personality disorder, was accused of repeatedly following Dr. Catherine Hunter, calling her and hanging up - including 127 times on one day - sending her flowers with bizarre notes and threatening to kill her. In May, she called Hunter's clinic and said a bomb would blow up the building.

The King County prosecutor's office said Karren had become "completely and totally fixated" on Hunter, a Renton-area physician who performed a hysterectomy on Karren last year.

Karren had been charged with felony stalking and felony harassment. But prosecutor Ye-Ting Woo accepted a plea bargain to misdemeanor charges, saying there were problems with Woo said the statute on felony stalking needs to be more clear with additional definitions. King County prosecutors have never convicted anyone on a felony stalking charge.

Although Karren pleaded guilty to the charges Friday in King County Superior Court, she made an Alford plea, which means that she maintains her innocence but believes the evidence available would have convicted her.
