

Taylor's College Side Inn is directly affected by the construction on Kincaid Street.

Street work raises concerns

For those who have stuck around the University all summer, it was all but impossible not to notice the Lane Transit District bus stop construction on Kincaid Street near East 13th Avenue.

Orange plastic webbing surrounded the site, eliminating parking spaces and one entrance to Taylor's College Side Inn.

"When they get a distraction like this, with numerous construction projects, it slows me down — I have to do so much backtracking," said Bob Edgemon, a U.S. Mail carrier for the campus. "I would think it would have been better to start it sooner, unless they can get it done before school starts."

"It seems like they're going awfully slow on the project. A lot of days there's no one (from the construction crew) here at all," he said. "I'm glad these guys aren't working on my house — I couldn't afford their wages."

Taylor's College Side Inn was most directly affected by the construction, since it lost the use of an entrance for several weeks and was adjacent to much of the construction work.

Bob Brinkman, owner of Taylor's, admits that his first reaction was negative.

"Essentially, if it's working, why fix it?" Brinkman said. "The arguments I've heard from LTD versus the loss of parking and bus activity didn't outweigh the reason to not go on with the project. But the project is happening, and we are trying to change our
