HOUSING

has, Eyster said.

Lounges will accommodate at least six students, and possibly more in some cases, Eyster said.

Part of the temporary space includes rooms at the Motel 66 on Franklin Boulevard. About 30 students were housed there as of last week.

Eyster said the students at the Motel 66 will be the first the University transfers to permanent housing.

A resident assistant has been assigned to the students to help them cope with problems that might arise.

"I've been quite impressed about how the University is handling (the students at the motel)," said Bob Walker, manager of the Motel 66.

Walker said the resident assistant hired for the motel has handled much of the paperwork and concerns that have arisen.

The University also contracted with the owner of a former sorority house that Eyster named the Cottage House, on the corner of East 19th Avenue and University Street. About 30 women will be permanently housed in the female-only facility.

About 10 women are temporarily living in the house, Romm said.

The University rented the house last year to house students, but Eyster said it wasn't until the middle of August that University Housing decided to rent the house again.

Eyster's office monitors any increase in student housing. So far, the number of residents in on-campus housing through the year doesn't demonstrate a need for new housing to be built, he said.

Freshmen face first nights in dorm

"Is there someone to help with these?" a concerned mother asked, regarding the mountain of bags and boxes that contained all of her daughters earthly possessions, as though the check she had written to University Housing included a fee for a valet.

The resident assistant just smiled. After all, he had already fielded about 500 hundred questions from the mechanical and mundane — "Will Johnny have study hours?" — to the ludicrous — "Why can't Jenny bunk with her friend in the University Inn?"

But soon the parents will return to the perfectly air-conditioned environment of their minivans. The mothers will begin to think about what necessary items to send in the next care-package (Kleenex, new undies, photos of pets), and the fathers' full attention will turn to making "good time" on the drive home.

About the same time that mom and dad are discovering that their drive home will take a little longer than expected because hundreds of other moms and dads are clogging Interstate 5 with aerodynamic family-movers, those they left behind are treated to something special ... their first dorm meal.

Although the blandness and inedibility of University food is generally overstated, Red Robin it ain't. Hence, the cafeteria myths such as "You know they use lard as a preservative on those German Sausages" will begin to circulate.

After dinner, the freshmen will split up into groups — which determines what strangers they will have to depend on the kindness of to purchase beer for them.

Some will over-dress and head out to their respective places, donning their newly acquired bota bags in an effort to gain respect and friends by slowly drinking themselves into a haze of belligerency.

Others will hire legions of the homeless to buy beverages from 7-Eleven. Then, they will head back to the dorms where R.A.s will take down the names of people who have backpacks that suspiciously conform to the shape of a half-rack of Blitz for use later in the evening.

The day will end in the wee hours of the morning when all freshmen will come to the same realization, "I could really use some fake I.D."
