Former coach unsure of future

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) — Don Monson, who pushed University of Idaho basketball into the national limelight in the late 1970s and early 1980s and later coached at Oregon, may have coached his last game.

Monson said he has turned down an invitation to return to Australia's pro basketball league and is uncertain if he will pursue another coaching job.

"I'm realistic enough to know there's not a lot of people who are going to hire a 61-year-old coach," Monson said last week from his Spokane home.

Monson returned to Spokane last week after coaching Adelaide's team in the National Basketball League of Australia.

Monson said he thoroughly enjoyed his experience in Australia. However, he balked when management asked him to sign a three-year contract, spend 11 months a year in Australia and work more with youth teams.

"It was a well-organized situation as far as the team I was working for," Monson said. "The league was probably more organized and better than I thought it would be."

Monson's team, the West End Eagle Super Sixers, posted a 14-12 record and came in seventh in a 14-team league.

"I had a really neat bunch of kids, or players ... they were very enjoyable," Monson said.

Monson's players ranged from 20 to 35 years of age. Two foreigners, usually Americans, are permitted to play on each team.

"You didn't have to worry about kids' grades, or who's in class, or at the study table, or recruits," noted Monson, who was fired last year after nine seasons at Oregon.

Monson said most NBL teams are equal or better than upper-half teams in the Big Sky Conference.

Monson and his wife, Deanna, lived on the ocean in a condo. Monson said the Adelaide fans packed the city's 8,000-seat arena.

UW, WSU lose players

SEATTLE (AP) — Washington wide receiver Jason Shelley, arrested after a high-speed chase through city streets, will be charged with misdemeanor charges of obstructing a police officer, the city attorney's office says.

Shelley, who was suspended for the season by Husky coach Jim Lambright after the incident, is scheduled for a court appearance in the case Tuesday, assistant city attorney Robert Chung said. On Monday, Shelley has a pre-trial hearing on a March 31 assault charge.

Shelley was arrested Oct. 3 after a high-speed chase through the University District. He was a passenger in the car, owned by his parents.

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Center Steve Wolfe will forego the remainder of the season after surgery on his left knee, Washington State coach Mike Price said Tuesday.

Wolfe, a 6-foot-4, 300-pound, fifth-year senior from Puyallup, has had 11 operations on his left knee, including major surgery that sidelined him all of last season.

After starting five games this season, Wolfe had arthroscopic surgery on the knee and did not play against Arizona State or California.

Price said Wolfe will become a student-assistant coach.
