You gave Danny a second chance.

When he was seven years old, Danny had adult-sized problems. He and his parents were alcohol and drug abusers. As Danny grew older, his problems grew greater. He'd do anything to get high—sniff glue, Freon, even gasoline.

Where do you go when you never really had a chance?

Danny's getting help from a drug treatment center. They're getting help from United Way. All because United Way got help from you.

You helped provide a place where a 17-year-old boy could learn to depend on himself...not on drugs.

COMMUNITY UPDATE

Eugene's leaf pickup program begins Monday and will continue through Jan. 7. City crews will collect leaves in five community areas at two different times during the program.

The city will collect leaves in these areas: downtown, Oct. 25-29 and Dec. 1-3; north Eugene, Nov. 1-5 and Dec. 6-10; central and west Eugene, Nov. 8-12 and Dec. 13-17; southeast Eugene, Nov. 15-19 and Dec. 20-30; Southwest Eugene, Nov. 22-30 and Jan. 3-7. For more information about leaf pickup and delivery, call 465-2348.

The Springfield Child Safety Fair is scheduled Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. at Hamlin Middle School, 326 Centennial Blvd.

The event, sponsored by the Springfield Block Home Program, coincides with National Crime Prevention Month. Highlights of the fair include appearances by McGruff the crime dog, carnival games and prizes. For more information, call Tana Patterson, 726-2323.

Lane County Public Health Services offers influenza immunization clinics each Wednesday at the Lane County Fairgrounds. Clinics are scheduled from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 4 p.m. Clinics run through November.

The United Way needs volunteers for the following positions: Daily living skills trainer for Halfway House services, an organization that runs group homes for adults with mental illnesses, two hours a week; clerk to work on special projects and prepare bulk mailings for Holt International Children's Services, two hours per week; volunteer salesperson to assist Girl Scout Council shop, four hours per week; landlord public safety liaison at Whiteaker Public Safety Station, three hours per week; and commissary worker at Lane County Adult Corrections, five hours Tuesdays or Fridays.

Dan Holland, director of Western Aquatic Research Consortium, will speak about Western pond turtles Tuesday at a Lane County Audubon Society meeting.

Holland will explain the natural history of pond turtles and the problems our community is having with the turtles. The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Eugene Garden Club, 1465 High St.

The Lane County Board of Commissioners is accepting applications from citizens interested in serving on the Community Corrections Advisory Committee.

The committee meets bimonthly to observe the operation of community corrections in Lane County. The commission has openings for one lay citizen position and one minority position.

Application deadline is Oct. 28 at 5 p.m. Applications are available at the Board of Commissioners' office, 125 E. 8th Ave.

Eugene City Council will hear public testimony about the city's stormwater management plan Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Eugene City Council Chamber, 777 Pearl St.

A pre-hearing information session is scheduled the same day from 5 to 7:30 p.m. The stormwater plan integrates existing flood control measures with the new federal water quality regulations and protects related natural resources in Eugene.

The Committee in Solidarity with the Central American People has scheduled a work-athon Saturday at the Food For Lane County warehouse, 255 Madison St.

The theme of this year's work party is "Building Communities from Eugene to El Salvador." Maria Isabela Morales, organizing director of the Melinda Anaya Montes Women's Movement, will speak about the upcoming Salvadoran elections at 9 a.m. Following her speech, groups will work at various projects around the city, including work for Food For Lane County and Eugene Emergency Housing.

A collection of rare clocks and watches will be displayed, beginning Oct. 27, at the Springfield Museum, 590 Main St.

"Clockmaker's Workshop" features clocks and watches representing 200 years of American and European timepieces. The museum is free and open to the public 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and noon to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

dwelling, not outside."

This is the third October exhibit by Womenspace at the courthouse.

"I think it makes people stop and look," said Pearl Wolfe, Womenspace's assistant director. "This affects people because it's either them or a friend or relative. Any opportunity to put this information out is really useful."

Wolfe said she hopes the exhibit's location makes it easy for women who are not yet ready to leave an abusive relationship to get information as they walk through the courthouse.

The organization is actively involved in combating domestic violence, providing emergency housing, transportation, counseling and shelter to battering victims.

Last year, the crisis line responded to more than 4,000 calls about domestic violence.

Womenspace also has community education programs through which more than 3,000 high school students learned about dating violence last year.

"We talk about definitions of abuse, warning signals, the cycle of violence and what prevents women from leaving a violent relationship," Wolfe said.

Wolfe said most domestic violence fits into a cyclical pattern, characterized by arguments and building tension that lead to a violent incident, which can be physical, verbal or sexual.

Following the incident, the abusive partner becomes apologetic and contrite, and may try to recreate the "ideal" relationship, which lasts until tensions build again.

Eventually, Wolfe said, the apologetic phase of the cycle disappears, and the relationship becomes one of tension and violence. She said this is when death or injury becomes more likely for either partner.

"Domestic violence occurs because people don't do anything to stop it," Wolfe said. "The message has to be that this won't be tolerated."
