Where do Japan-related companies go to meet talented, qualified people to fill their needs?

DISCO's International Career Forums

When the world's sharpest young minds meet the world's most successful companies, connections are bound to be formed. At DISCO International Career Forums international companies connect with the pick of the year's brightest Japanese-speaking university graduates. These same university graduates connect with companies that have a need for talented bilingual people with engineering, business, accounting or research skills.

DISCO, Development of Information Services for Career Opportunities, has been bringing great minds together for nearly 20 years. Through our renowned Nikkei Placement Guide series and international job fairs, we specialize in bringing Japan-affiliated companies and bilingual job seekers together. To find out how you or your company can participate in an International Career Forum, please call the DISCO office nearest you.

KWVA

Marymount's AM station and is excited about the possibilities at KWVA. He said he wants to see the station put on concerts by high-profile bands that do not normally stop in Eugene.

Drew said he does not want to compete with local venues, but wants to fill a niche in the community and have more all-age shows. "We have great bands coming through, but nobody gets to see them," he said.

KWVA, with an active staff of nearly 80, is one of the newest stations in the nation, and this marks its first major reshaping since going on the air May 27.

"It was started by people who pretty much built it from the ground up," Pierson said.

Many of them had no experience at other stations, and Pierson suggested the structures they formed were based more on invention than on procedures standard in the radio business.

With the changes, Pierson hopes to structure KWVA like nearly all other radio stations and create a more accurate training ground for students.

The torch of leadership has essentially been passed from the first generation, that fought long and hard to get on the air, down to the second, that wants to see the station grow and expand, Drew said.

"I think everyone has realized this new system is better," Paranjpe said. "Everything was OK before the new guys came in, but it is better now."

Pierson hopes students will be involved in shaping the station. "I'm always available to talk to anybody who has questions and concerns," he said.

STUDENT

The men then left the building, but Birr said it is doubtful they went to Springfield because the girl called the University Office of Public Safety, which in turn called Eugene police about 2:24 p.m.

An officer was in pursuit of the three suspects at 2:43 p.m., and Birr said he did not believe three people from out of town could get from the University Inn to Springfield and back in that short of time.

Shelley and Perkins were on suspension from the Washington football and basketball teams, respectively, at the time of the incident and both were kicked off of their teams permanently on Monday. Barnes, a defensive end for the Washington football team, was suspended indefinitely by head coach Jim Lambright Monday.

Birr said no other University students are currently being investigated by police for involvement in the case.
