ASUO registers 3,000 students

By Edward Klopfenstein
Oregon Daily Emerald

The ASUO's voter registration drive fell 1,000 voters short of its 4,000 student goal, the student official organizing the drive said Wednesday.

Phil Bentley, ASUO state affairs coordinator, said the drive claimed more than 2,400 students registering through the ASUO office and another 500 to 700 students who registered directly with the Lane County Election Office.

The ASUO requested results only from the polling districts near the University and near Westmoreland Family Housing on West 18th Avenue and Arthur Street.

The next highest voter registration drive results came from Oregon State University. The student government there registered 1,200 students.

Other figures include: Eastern Oregon State College - 250; Western Oregon State College - 350; and Southern Oregon State College - 325.

"Compared with what other schools did, this school did real great," Bentley said.

Last year, the ASUO surpassed its registration goal of more than 4,000 students. But this year's final number of about 3,000 was still respectable, Bentley said, because the ASUO was the only organization on campus requesting that students register.

Most student organizations pushed voter registration last year because passionate issues like state Ballot Measure 9 presented a compelling reason to register, he said.

This year's central issue, state Ballot Measure 1, the state sales tax measure, is still vital to student interests, he said, because it could provide a new funding source for the state's education system.

The outcome will depend on whether registered voters for the measure actually vote.

"This is an election where the outcome is with the people who vote," he said. "If the yes people vote, then this will pass. But if the yes people sit at home and decide not to vote, then the people who vote no will win."

The ASUO is switching gears from its voter registration drive to a "get out and vote" effort that will focus on motivating students to get to the polls, he said.

Although no educational forums are currently scheduled, the ASUO will be canvassing the campus with volunteers, reminding students to vote on Election Day next Tuesday.

Bentley said this phase of the ASUO's voting campaign will also be based at the ASUO office, Suite 4 EMU.

Anyone with questions about Ballot Measure 1 or where to vote or who might need transportation on the day of the election can call the ASUO at 346-3724. The ASUO will have a van available for transportation to the polls.

Bentley urged students who registered but are having problems obtaining their voter registration card to call the Lane County Elections Office directly at 687-4234.
