British alternative rock veterans Depeche Mode will come to Portland's Memorial Coliseum this Monday in support of their 10th release, Songs Of Faith and Devotion. The tour marks a whole new sound and appearance for the band's live performances.

"Basically, Alan wanted to play drums and to produce the songs live," keyboardist Andrew Fletcher said. "He drums on about seven or eight of the numbers, and Martin plays more guitar."

For the Oregon Daily Emerald

Over the past year or so, spoofs have become almost a film genre unto themselves.

Most recently, the two Naked Gun movies and Robin Hood: Men in Tights come to mind.

Whereas Mel Brooks laughed at all Robin Hood films in existence, Fatal Instinct launches itself at the bottomless pit of erotic thrillers.

Carl Reiner directs this most recent venture into the realm of spoofdom, and nearly pulls it off.

There are so many allusions to both Basic Instinct and Sliver, that the film often loses itself
