Oregon and Stanford ready for Saturday shoot-out

By Steve Mims
Oregon Daily Emerald

Stanford head coach Bill Walsh said this week that he believed Oregon and his Cardinals would have a tough time getting up for Saturday's game because they would be looking forward to games against their respective rivals the following week.

Fat chance. Although the Cardinal (3-6, 1-5) may be looking forward to The Big Game against California next weekend, Oregon (5-4, 2-4) knows it must win both of its final two games to qualify for a bowl game. All the clichés like "we've got our backs to the wall" and "there's no tomorrow" apply to Oregon this weekend.

It's a different story for the Cardinal, who are just playing out the string for this season. Walsh said he plans to give playing time this week to younger players who will be the core of Stanford's future. Some freshmen who will see time include running backs Greg Comella and Quincy Jacobs, along with quarterback Scott Frost.

On paper, Saturday's game would appear to be a shoot-out between two teams with high-powered offenses and beat-up defenses. Both quarterbacks are on pace to set Pacific-10 Conference records this season for total offense and passing yardage.

Stanford senior Steve Stenstrom leads the league in total offense with 2,703 yards, 173 more yards than Oregon's Danny O'Neil. Both are within reach of the conference record of 3,155 yards held by Washington State's Timm Rosenbach. Stenstrom leads the league with 2,869 yards passing, just ahead of O'Neil's 2,651 yards. The Pac-10 record for passing yards in a season is 3,242, held by former Cardinal John Elway.

"Steve Stenstrom is a very impressive player," Oregon head coach Rich Brooks said. "They are throwing the ball as well anybody in the nation without much of a running game and that's hard to do. They find people open all the time and Stenstrom stands in there and takes shots."

Although Stanford and Oregon are 1-2 in the conference in passing offense, they rank 10th and ninth in rushing, respectively. Stanford is the only Pac-10 team averaging less than 100 yards rushing (it averages 72.1) and they rank dead last in the nation in that category as well.

Ellery Roberts leads the Cardinal in rushing with 395 yards, an average of only 43.9 yards per game. No other Cardinal is averaging more than 20 yards per game rushing. This would appear to be good news for the Ducks, who gave up 389 yards rushing to Arizona last week, but Oregon has struggled to defend the pass as well this year.

"We need to regroup coming off one of our worst defensive performances in recent memory," said Brooks, who can pass Len Casanova for the most wins in school history if he gets his 83rd win Saturday. "It was very discouraging to look at the tapes and see our lack of aggressiveness [at Arizona]."

O'Neil will look to pick apart a defense that has had to regroup this year after losing linebacker Ron George, cornerback Darrien Gordon and safety John Lynch to the NFL. The Cardinal start six seniors on defense, but mix in a lot of youngsters as well. Linebackers Coy Gibbs and Toby Norwood and safety Kevin Garnett have been the most impressive members of the Cardinal defense this year.

"I felt we might have a defense that was acceptable and have a bright future," Walsh said. "We are disappointed in how we've done because you can't do much worse."

The Ducks will see quite a change across the line when they line up on offense this week compared to last week. Stanford ranks dead last in the conference in rushing defense, passing efficiency defense, total defense and scoring defense, four categories that Oregon's opponent last week, Arizona, leads the conference in.
