FROM THE PAST: John Stark Evans, an associate music school professor, wrote the Oregon pledge song in 1917 while he waited on a dock in New York City to disembark for France and combat in World War I.

KITZHABER

tisanship in the Oregon statehouse.

"We must stop viewing the budget as an isolated two-year balancing exercise," Kitzhaber said, "but rather as a tool for achieving our long-term objectives which include re-investing in Oregon's education infrastructure."

Kitzhaber blamed the state's current economic crisis on poor prioritization of resources already curtailed by Measure 5. Kitzhaber said lawmakers' preference for public safety and human resources over education and transportation have destroyed Oregon's economic foundation.

"Education is the engine that is going to drive our future economy," he said, "and a well-educated work-force provides the basis for us to maintain a safe, livable and compassionate society.

"I don't think the vote last Tuesday (on Ballot Measure 1) was about education," Kitzhaber said. "It was about a lack of confidence in governance and in the ability of the sate to manage its money."

Although Kitzhaber commended Roberts' recent proposal to seek out an additional $200 million in cuts from the state budget after the defeat of the sales tax initiative, he cautioned that her plan is a short-term approach to a much larger budgeting problem.

The challenger also reiterated his intentions to run a positive, issue-based campaign against Roberts and called on her to do the same. Recently the governor commented that Kitzhaber, an avid outdoorsman, would rather spend his time river rafting than taking care of Oregonians.

'There are those who choose to view Oregon's current economic situation as a threat, but I prefer to see it as a challenge.'

— John Kitzhaber,
gubernatorial candidate

Phil Bentley, co-chairman of Students for Kitzhaber, saigroup presented its candidate with more than 200 petition signatures gathered by the student organization. Kitzhaber needs 1,000 signatures from seven Oregon counties to qualify for the May ballot.

"As students, we have all witnessed the dramatic effects of budget cuts and tuition increases from which we get fewer classes, program cuts and decreased access to student services," Bentley said. "Consequently we believe its time for change in leadership."

Bentley said the group will campaign both on the University campus and in the surrounding communities of Lane County.

Students for Kitzhaber will operate independent of the University Democrats. However, University Democrats President Richard Bernstein points out that his organization remains committed to promoting an issue-based campaign between Roberts and Kitzhaber.
