Numerous problems hurt Ducks

No one in the Oregon locker room Saturday could explain what happened to the Ducks this season. Many of them looked as if they were ready to throw their uniforms in the equipment bags and never take them out again.

Oregon State? Who could think about those pesky Beavers. Oregon's season is over, no matter how you look at it.

What went wrong? A whole bunch of things. It was a combination of numerous things that aren't all that unfamiliar to Duck fans.

1. The Cal Game: The Ducks were at 3-0; Cal was at 4-0. Oregon led 30-0, and Cal recovered with the biggest comeback in Pacific-10 Conference history. It was the most devastating game of the season for the Ducks.

The final score read 42-41, but could have been 42-0, making it easier for the Oregon team to swallow. The Ducks were never able to quite regain their footing after this one.

2. The Defense: Remember way back at the beginning of the season? The main problem back then was the offense and Danny O'Neil. The defense was being hailed as one of the most talented in the conference. Instead, the offense and O'Neil put up amazing numbers, but the defense gave up even more amazing numbers.

Against Stanford, O'Neil threw for 386 yards, but was still outgained by Steve Stenstrom, who picked the Ducks apart for 407 yards. O'Neil threw for more than 300 yards in seven games this season, but in four of those games, the opposing quarterback threw for more yards than O'Neil.

3. The Running Game: The Ducks gained more than 100 yards only twice this season, against Cal and Montana. They are among the worst in the nation in rushing. People were confident Ricky Whittle and Sean Burwell would make up one of the best running back duos in the conference, but injuries and inconsistency kept the coaches wondering if either one of them would step up. Neither did.

4. The Defensive Backs: This could be attributed to injuries. Oregon came into the season with Chad Cota, Herman O'Berry and Alex Molden as rock-solid holdovers from last season in the secondary. However, O'Berry was lost for the season after the first game and Molden also missed a couple of games, leaving a young bunch of backs to try and defend the pass-happy Pac-10 opponents. They failed miserably first in the Cal game, giving up 368 yards and three touchdowns. After that, they also blew it against USC and, of course, Stanford.

About the only positive of the season was the play by O'Neil and his receivers. Derek Deadwiler, Cristin McLemore and Willie Tate provided some memorable moments and put up some memorable numbers. But the numbers everyone's going to remember from this season is the final record (5-6 or 6-5, depending on what you think will happen this weekend).

Have fun Saturday. Drink lots of booze.

Potter out for 4-6 weeks

Oregon junior forward Jeff Potter tore a ligament in his left elbow and could miss as many as six weeks, men's basketball coach Jerry Green announced Monday.

"This will effect this young team since Jeff was one of the few post players with experience returning," Green said. "I hope his rehabilitation goes well and we can get him back sometime in the near future."

Oregon begins play next Tuesday with an exhibition game against the Bamburg Club at McArthur Court.

Potter will be further examined Tuesday and a final rehabilitation plan will be established according to Oregon trainer Ed Elder.

Potter injured his ulnar collateral ligament on the inside of his left elbow. He is in a half-cast right now to immobilize the arm.

Potter, a 6-foot-9, 225-pound starter from Redmond, Wash.,

averaged 9.6 points and 4.2 rebounds last year and was voted the Jesse Nash Most Improved Player award.

Michael Carson, one of the top prep centers in the nation, has signed a letter of intent with the Oregon basketball team, Green announced Monday.

Carson, a 6-foot-11, 230-pound center from Chino, Calif., will join the Ducks as a freshman for the 1994-95 season.

"Having just one scholarship available, I felt we needed a post player and believe Mike is a very fine player," Green said. "He comes from an outstanding family, and we look forward to working with him. We needed a post player with some size and Mike certainly fill that bill."

Carson, a senior at Don Lugo High School, played at the Nike All-American Festival in Indianapolis last June, a showcase for the top prep players in the country.

Carson averaged 13.3 points, 8.7 rebounds and 2.4 blocked shots as a junior. He grew an inch-and-a-half since the end of last season and is now just under seven feet. He is also involved with soccer and swimming at Don Lugo.
