SUPERFLY

Dear Superfly,
If I have a female cat and I don't want her to have kittens; do I get her spayed or neutered? Please explain.

— Confused Cat Owner

Dear Confused Cat Owner,
Superfly suggests you take the cat to the vet and let the vet explain further. Then get back to us because we are just as baffled as you are.

Dear Superfly,
Since forever, I've had an uncontrollable hatred for dogs. Well, my two best friends have a dog and also have knowledge of my dog hatred. Problem being, they go out of their way to shove their dog's wet, slimy nose in my face and his dirty paws on my clean clothes.

My friends are always with a smelly dog and if they don't begin to respect me soon, they are going to start to smell. I'm getting choice in schools.

"My youngest son once asked me on a Friday night, 'Is there school tomorrow?' When I said no, he was disappointed," Evans said. "That's what I look at. ... I ask them, 'Are you content here?' They've always said yes."

Each class at Waldorf is designed specifically for each level of development a child goes through according to the philosophies of Rudolf Steiner. For instance, Evans' daughter Soleo's first-grade class is making knitting needles right now. At the same time, fifth-grader Zoe is learning how to knit socks.

"The primary goal of Waldorf Education is to develop the full creative potential of each individual human being," a brochure on the school says. This emphasis appeals to Evans.

"Public schools are so big," she said. "It's easy to homogenize people. Public schools just don't have the money, resources and people to give attention to students as individuals."

Evans also likes the fact that educators at Waldorf try to tie every element of the curriculum into one theme, such as farming.

"Every child builds a dwelling, a tiny one, like a little log cabin that they can stay in for one night, and in another class they plant seeds, and take walks and study local geography," Evans said. "It

FIS

Eric Bowen, ASUO president, said the student organization also is looking forward to using FIS.

Tracking student accounts for outstanding debts proves difficult because accounting paperwork could take nearly a month to complete, he said. Several student groups this term have already requested help from the Incidental Fee Committee to erase debt caused by mismanagement.

With the new system, the ASUO will be able to track student accounts and monitor expenses immediately by computer, he said, which should help end mismanagement. The ASUO currently tracks student accounts by hand.

Racette said training sessions for staff will begin late winter term and run through spring. Employees that will be working directly with the new software have already begun training.

The computer system will have several levels of security, from read only to full access to all of them. We have a small apartment with limited space, so we can't put the plants out of reach. How can I keep the cat from destroying my plants?

— Plant Lover

Dear Plant Lover,
Your problem can be easily remedied. Just follow our 6,237 easy-to-follow steps. But for you, we'll offer you a condensed version.

1. Neatly stack all of your loved ones (plants) into the bathtub or shower.

2. Whenever the cat attempts to traumatize one of your chlorofilled buddies, turn on the shower and watch how amazingly successful our easy to follow steps really are.

dogged! What can I do to save the relationship and still keep the dog alive?

Sincerely,

— The Dog Catcher

Dear Dogged,

Superfly thinks it's time for you to get some respect in this town! Drop those friends and trade them in for new ones. If they can't understand the seriousness of your matter, then there's nothing more to do.

Dear Superfly,

My roommate just got a cat. The problem is that her cat likes to tear up my plants. She's already severely traumatized two

Waldorf School presents annual Faire next month

Eugene Waldorf School will have its 14th Annual Christmas Faire Dec. 4 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 1350 McLean Blvd. off of West 28th Avenue.

The Faire, an annual fundraiser for the school, will include the Little People's Market, storytelling, hands-on crafts, silk puppet shows, handmade dolls and toys, food and fresh Christmas trees for sale.

Raffle tickets, with prizes such as a Hawaiian vacation, tickets to The Nutcracker, a bicycle trailer, a romantic overnight beach trip for two, piano tuning and a sports massage, are available at selected locations and at the Faire. They are $1 each or $5 for six. You need not be present to win.

Admission to the Faire is free. For more information or to buy raffle tickets, call the school at 683-6951.

all ties into house building and farming. They teach a holistic view of life."

One of the greatest success factors of Waldorf schools is parental participation, which Evans said is expected to be a large part of the education of their children.

"That's real important to me because it was lacking in my life," she said.

In spite of the closeness of the Waldorf school community, Evans said the school shows no traces of dogma.

"There is no resonance of cult or close-mindedness ... which is real important to me and which is a real relevant concern in our society," she said.

In 1919, the first Waldorf school was founded for the children of the workers at Waldorf Astoria Cigarette Factory in Stuttgart, Germany. Rudolf Steiner (1861-1925), the founder, was a scientist interested in applying his theories about the development of the human being.

Following Steiner's teachings, Waldorf schools attempt to address the particular developmental needs of children at each level of schooling.

"There are two magic words which indicate how the child enters into relation with his environment," Steiner once said. "They are: imitation and example. The Greek philosopher Aristotle called man the most imitative of creatures. For no age in life is this more true than for the first steps of childhood, before the change of teeth."

accounts, she said, adding that the system employs several checks and balances that work against illegal use.

A prototype of the Banner Student Information System, FIS was first introduced on the market about three years ago. Racette said the University wanted to wait on installing the system because implementing FIS with the new student system would prove too taxing to staff.

The University also wanted to wait for a later edition of the software to ensure the system would be free of bugs, she said.

The University and Portland State University will be the first schools to implement the system in Oregon.

Other schools in the Oregon State System of Higher Education will be implementing the system during the next three years.

OSSHE will fund the University's switch to FIS. The state Legislature allocated funding for the FIS program during the last session, Racette said.
